the fifth century ad has always been a period of intense interest for historians at the beginning the roman empire looked as impentable as it had done for centuries but by 500ad the world had changed beyond recognition the western emperor had been deposed and the imperial government had lost control of most of europe from now on inhabitants of western europe lived in a post roman world the writers of latin histories in the fifth century were not concerned with the minutiae of politcs or military affairs they were christians who saw the development of the world purely as god s plan for humanity the connection between present and past was best shown through the new type of historical work the christian chronicle the narrative structure of which was based around extensive lists with minimal written detail the three chroniclers whose work is discussed here were amongst the earliest to take up this new literary form and each wrote a continuation of jerome s chroncile itself a translation of eusebius christian world chronicle

From Rome to Byzantium 1998 the plight of rome in the fifth century ad argues that the fall of the western roman empire was rooted in a significant drop in war booty agricultural productivity and mineral resources merrony proposes that a dependency on the three economic components was established with the principate when a precedent was set for an unsustainable threshold on military spending drawing on literary and archaeological data this volume establishes a correspondence between booty in the form of slaves and precious metals from foreign campaigns and public building programmes and how this equilibrium was upset after the empire reached its full expansion and began to contract in the third century it is contended that this trend was exacerbated by the systematic loss of agricultural productivity principally grain but also livestock as successive barbarian tribes were settled and wrested control from the imperial authorities in the fifth century merrony explores how rome was weakened and divided unable to pay its army feed its people or support the imperial bureaucracy and how this contributed to its administrative collapse the author intends in his book to give the reader with little or no greek a chance to see for himself how the writers nearest to the events described their age the fifth century and specifically the dealings of the west and east roman courts with the barbarians for this purpose he has translated those fragments of olympiodorus priscus malchus candidus and john of antioch which have an immediate bearing on political events distributed them over six chapters and connected them with brief introductions and comments notes contain cross references references to other ancient and a few modern writings and textual criticism the so called general reader is bound to get a one sided picture of the fifth century unless he fits the fragments into the one he has already drawn for himself from gibbon bury seeck or stein used with caution as a supplement to textbooks the volume may fulfill its purpose excerpt from the greek theater of the fifth century before christ the process of development which has just been traced is shown most clearly in the case of the theater in the precinct of dionysus eleuthereus on the southeastern slope of the acropolis at athens which so far as is known was the only greek theater in existence in the fifth century before christ fig whether another existed at this time also in the lenaeum wherever the lenaeum was 7 is disputed but as we know nothing concerning it we may dismiss it from consideration about the publisher forgotten books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books find more at forgottenbooks.com this book is a reproduction of an important historical work forgotten books uses state of the art technology to digitally reconstruct the work preserving the original format whilst repairing imperfections present in the aged copy in rare cases an imperfection in the original such as a blemish or missing page may be replicated in our edition we do however repair the vast majority of imperfections freestanding bronze statuary was the primary mode of artistic expression in classical greece yet it was not until the nineteenth century that any original large statues of that period were unearthed although ancient literature has preserved information about the most famous greek sculptors who worked in bronze our perception of the art has been limited by the small number of extant originals from the sixth and fifth centuries b c there remain fewer than ten large cast bronze statues a like number of bronze heads an assortment of fragments and some clay molds for casting carol mattusch enriches our knowledge of this beloved but elusive art form in a comprehensive study of the style and techniques of bronze statuary during the archaic 6th century b c and classical 5th century b c periods this book has chapters on methodology on the writing of the first decrees and laws of the years ca 515 to 450 b c on unique examples of writing of ca 450 to 400 on the inscribers of the lapis primus and lapis secundus ig i3 259 280 and on those of the attic stelai ig i3 421 430 these are followed by studies of 11 individual cutters arranged in chronological order this study brings order to the study of hands of the fifth century by setting out a methodology and by discussing the attempts of others to identify hands another aim is to bring out the individuality of the writing of these early inscribers it shows that from the beginning the writing on athenian inscriptions on stone was very idiosyncratic for all intents and purposes individual writing it identifies the inscribing of the sacred inventories of athena beginning about 450 b c as the genesis of the professional letter cutter in athens and traces the trajectory of the profession while the dating of many inscriptions will remain a matter for scholarly discussion the present study narrows the dates of many texts it also pinpoints the origin of the mistaken idea that three bar sigma did not occur on public documents after the year 446 in order to make those who are not expert more aware that this is not a reliable means of dating the waynelete lectures given under the auspices of magdalen college oxford delivered in 1983 by professor francis and published here under the title image and idea in fifth century greece are important because they challenge the way that the ancient world and its artistic and literary productions are often viewed francis believed that the ancient world was a unity in which issues of the day were reflected in the language of pictorial and sculptural representation and in the works of literature if professor francis s case is valid then the pan hellenic construction of temples erection of dedicatory statues and the general joie de vivre to be found in the artefacts of the late archaic period can be seen as the physical manifestations of greek victory over the persians in 480 and 479
