lectures sympathy is an index of solidarity but its rational material basis offers a riposte to charges that Thelwall seeks to exploit the unruly energies of his audience. John Thelwall and the materialist imagination reassesses Thelwall's eclectic body of work from the perspective of his heterodox materialist arguments about the imagination, political reform, and the principle of life itself, and his contributions to the Romantic era. Science, John Thelwall was a Romantic and Enlightenment polymath during the 1790s; he achieved national recognition as an orator, republican, Jacobin theorist, and leading member of the proto-democratic London Corresponding Society, focusing on the period 1750-1850. The journal continues to welcome critical historical, textual, and bibliographical essays prepared to the highest scholarly standards and seeks to represent a full range of current methodological and theoretical debate. The recovery of John Thelwall as an object of serious attention began in the 1960s with E. P. Thompson, and he has now achieved genuine recognition. Thelwall's writings enjoy scholarly editions of his work as a law clerk. See Thelwall, Prefatory Memoir, xv-xviii; C. Thelwall, 21-38; and Claeys, Introduction, xiv-xv. The strategic use of the body politic and related metaphors has a long tradition in British literature and politics, and critical studies are voluminous. John Thelwall (1764-1834) was a radical English journalist and writer who supported the ideals of the French Revolution and sought similar political reforms in Britain, such as universal suffrage, annual elections for Parliament, and freedom of association. John Thelwall was tried last; the government felt forced to try him because the loyalist press had argued that his case was particularly strong. While awaiting trial, he wrote and published poetry indicting the entire process. John Thelwall (1533-1630), the oldest, was brought up at court as groom of the stole and gentleman usher to the Countess of Warwick when he was 32 years of age. He married Elizabeth, daughter and co-heir of Robert ap John Wyn of Bacheirig and Bryn Cynwrig by patent from James I. He was made steward of Ruthin.
