companies and brands in the same way that we unconsciously perceive judge and behave toward one another people everywhere describe their relationships with brands in adeeply personal way we hate our banks love our smartphones and think the cable company is out to get us what s actually goingon in our brains when we make these judgments through original research customer loyalty expert chris malone and top social psychologist susan fiske discovered that our perceptions arise from spontaneous judgments on warmth and competence the same twofactors that also determine our impressions of people we seecompanies and brands the same way we automatically perceive judge and behave toward one another as a result to achieve sustained success companies must forge genuine relationships with customers and as customers we have a right to expect relational accountability from the companies and brands we support applies the social psychology concepts of warmth what intentions others have toward us and competence how capablethey are of carrying out those intentions to the way we perceive and relate to companies and brands features in depth analyses of companies such as hershey s domino s lululemon zappos amazon chobani sprint and more draws from original research evaluating over 45 companies over the course of 10 separate studies the human brand is essential reading for understandinghow and why we make the choices we do as well as what it takes for companies and brands to earn and keep our loyalty in the digital age this book delivers what sewers are looking for and ethical rules that govern this important part of trial using famous historical cases and many useful examples the authors demonstrate when things go wrong and when they are done right opening statements can present the important facts to the jury from the party's perspective making the jurors receptive to the story that counsel intends to tell through the witnesses documents and visuals well constructed and well delivered openings which avoid improper argument make an interesting introduction of the parties and the attorneys counsel can keep the other lawyer quiet by presenting an opening that provides no opportunity for interruption with objections closing arguments that can present inferences arguments and conclusions will help the jurors understand the significance of the facts that have been proven at trial such arguments can explain the significance of expert testimony they can point out logical errors in the opponents stories and they can win the jurors by persuading them that the more interesting story the more natural story the story that fits their own experiences best is the truthful story prominent economists discuss internal labor markets the
