Field Sampling 2004-05-21 the irish famine that began in 1845 was one of the nineteenth century s greatest disasters by its end the island s population of eight million had shrunk by a third through starvation disease and emigration this is a brilliant compassionate retelling of that awful story for a new generation the first account for the general reader for many years and a triumphant example of narrative non fiction at its best the immediate cause of the famine was a bacterial infection of the potato crop on which too many the irish poor depended what turned a natural disaster into a human disaster was the determination of senior british officials to use relief policy as an instrument of nation building in their oldest and most recalcitrant colony well meaning civil servants were eager to modernise irish agriculture and to improve the irish moral character which was utterly lacking in the virtues of the new age of triumphant capitalism the result was a relief programme more concerned with fostering change than of saving lives this is history that resonates powerfully with our own times

What to Do When He Says, I Don't Love You Anymore 2002-09-29 i ve enjoyed gathering up some memories and creating a souvenir not just for myself but for others who might walk a similar path i hope you will walk with me for a little while and catch glimpses of hope to tuck away for strength and ease when facing the unknown regarding personal loss of health much of this book comes from my daily recording what was going on during the year i searched for answers about my health and the following radiation and chemotherapy treatments i added in places my thoughts at the time and even some of my feelings i hope you will find it informative if only from my point of view much i have written is just how i would say it to you if we were sitting down together having a visit i learned the down times in my life aren t all full of woe but are even good times you will see how i learned to appreciate family and friends love and good deeds reality and gratitude laughter and tears and the beauty that is all over god s green earth i thank god for my life all of it
