The author analyzes the homeowners' resistance through law, the subsequent remaking of private property and the hybrid legal culture of property in early Communist Romania. Anitta M. Hipper examines to what extent and under what conditions the EU's transformative power met with resistance in Romania. The book touches upon a raw nerve for most post-Communist societies: justice and anti-corruption reform through the use of a context-sensitive approach. It assesses how domestic factors influenced the implementation of EU conditionality towards Romania from 1990 to 2012. Empirical investigations reveal a struggle between various interested parties in complying with EU conditionality. As a result, a complex layer of non-compliance emerged and it became a Herculean task to ensure the sustainability of reform by reformist forces within Romania and the EU.
