the pharaohs were masters of the Nile they had a detailed understanding of the ways of the river modern Egyptians see themselves as heirs to this tradition and as owners of the Nile waters in the 1960 s Egypt decided to protect its increasingly populated Nile valley from the ravages of annual flooding by building a dam a relatively small dam in the valley of Nubia in the region of Tushka would have enabled the excess floodwaters to safely be diverted towards the fossil valley of the pre Nile however it was decided to select a site near Aswan making it necessary to inundate more than 250km of river valley over the years this strategy has been revealed to have been faulty and numerous irrigation schemes in upriver countries have progressively reduced the amount of water descending into Egypt the dire warning of the 14th century oracle appears to be prophetic the water of the river in my country will be stopped from reaching yours which I shall cause to die of thirst

the end of the pleistocene c 75 15 ka is a key period for the prehistory of the Nile valley the climatic fluctuations documented during this period have led human populations from the middle and late palaeolithic to adapt to a changing Nile in particular the global shift to more arid conditions regionally translated into the expansion of the Sahara the lowering of sea levels and the desiccation of some major eastern African lakes these climatically induced environmental changes influenced the behaviour of the Nile although how exactly is still debated and its role as an ecological refugium for human populations living in its vicinity genetic and fossil evidence highlight a strong population substructure in Africa during this period suggesting the alternation of phases of major dispersals of modern humans within the continent as well as out of and back into Africa with phases of relative isolation of populations which might be linked to the creation of environmental refugia during the climatic fluctuations of this period understanding to what extent the technological variability observed in north eastern Africa between 75 000 and 15 000 years ago is linked to environmental changes and or possible contacts between different human populations is critical in this context the best preserved evidence for past human behavior are archaeological assemblages most often lithic assemblages however the use of different terminologies whether they refer to cultural or techno typological entities hampers any systematic comparison between the Nile valley on one hand and neighbouring regions on the other hand an outcome of this practice is the artificial isolation of the north eastern African record from its neighbouring regions this monograph groups together chapters presenting updated reviews and new data on regional archaeological palaeoenvironmental palaeoanthropological and geological records from north eastern Africa north Africa the Levant and eastern Africa for the period ranging from 75 000 to 15 000 years ago while north eastern Africa and the Nile valley in particular is generally considered as one of the main possible routes of migrations out of Africa few recent studies allow the data from this region to be viewed from a macro regional perspective this book allows the exploration of topical issues such as modern humans capacity for adaptation particularly in the context of climate change as well as population interactions and human dispersals in the past taking a multidisciplinary approach
