political theorists jeremy elkins and andrew norris observe that american political culture is deeply ambivalent about truth on the one hand voices on both the left and right make confident appeals to the truth of claims about the status of the market in public life and the role of scientific evidence and argument in public life human rights and even religion on the other hand there is considerable anxiety that such appeals threaten individualism and political plurality this anxiety elkins and norris contend has perhaps been greatest in the humanities and in political theory where many have responded by either rejecting or neglecting the whole topic of truth the essays in this volume question whether democratic politics requires discussion of truth and if so how truth should matter to democratic politics while individual essays approach the subject from different angles the volume as a whole suggests that the character of our politics depends in part on what kinds of truthful inquiries it promotes and how it deals with various kinds of disputes about truth the contributors to the volume including prominent political and legal theorists philosophers and intellectual historians argue that these are important political and not merely theoretical questions truth is in trouble in response this book presents a new conception of truth it recognizes that prominent philosophers have questioned whether the idea of truth is important some have asked why we even need it their questions reinforce broader trends in western society where many wonder whether or why we should pursue truth indeed some pundits say we have become a post truth society yet there are good reasons not to embrace the cultural zeitgeist or go with the philosophical flow reasons to regard truth as a substantive and socially significant idea this book explains why first it argues that propositional truth is only one kind of truth an important kind but not all important then it shows how propositional truth belongs to the more comprehensive process of truth as a whole this process is a dynamic correlation between human fidelity to societal principles and a life giving disclosure of society the correlation comes to expression in distinct social domains of truth where either propositional or nonpropositional truth is primary the final chapters lay out five such domains science politics art religion and philosophy anyone who cares about the future of truth in society will want to read this pathbreaking book in democracy disfigured nadia urbinati diagnoses the ills that beset the body politic in an age of hyper partisanship and media monopolies and offers a spirited defense of the messy compromises and contentious outcomes that define democracy urbinati identifies three types of democratic disfiguration the unpolitical the populist and the plebiscitarian each undermines a crucial division that a well functioning democracy must preserve the wall separating the free forum of public opinion from governmental institutions that enact the will of the people unpolitical democracy delegitimizes political opinion in favor of expertise populist democracy radically polarizes the public forum in which opinion is debated and plebiscitary democracy overvalues the aesthetic and nonrational aspects of opinion for urbinati democracy entails a permanent struggle to make visible the issues that citizens deem central to their lives opinion is thus a form of action as important as the mechanisms that organize votes and mobilize decisions urbinati focuses less on the overt enemies of democracy than on those who pose as its friends technocrats wedded to procedure demagogues who make glib appeals to the people and media operatives who given their preference would turn governance into a spectator sport and citizens into fans of opposing teams philosophy in seeking after truth must also grapple with questions about the nature and status of truth itself is there for example such a thing as fully objective truth or is our talk of truth merely a projection onto the world of what we find acceptable in moral argument scientific theory mathematical discourse such questions are at the center of truth and objectivity which offers an original perspective on the place of realism in philosophical inquiry crispin wright proposes a radically new framework for the discussion of the claims of the realists who think of truth as fully objective and the anti realists who oppose them a framework which rejects the classical deflationary conception of truth yet allows both realist and antirealist to respect the intuition that judgements whose status they contest such as those in moral argument and theoretical science may often justifiably be regarded as true the real issues that must be resolved if the contest between realist and anti realist views of a range of judgements is to be properly adjudicated are different and are here developed in detail from a sharply novel perspective in addition wright offers original critical discussions of many central concerns of philosophers interested in realism including the deflationary conception of truth internal realist truth scientific realism and the theoreticity of observation truth and correspondence to fact role of moral states of affairs in explanations of moral beliefs anti realism about content and the quietism toward this whole tradition of debate favored by some philosophers of wittgensteinian sympathies wright s proposals are arrestingly original interesting and rich in implication recasting important questions about truth and objectivity in new and helpful terms his book will become a focus in the contemporary debates over realism and will give new impetus to these debates in all areas of philosophy arne ness naess 1912 2009 shows with careful questioning of people who are not professional philosophers that there is no single common notion of truth and indeed the variety of views that philosophers hold on truth are held by more or less equal proportions of those he interviews non philosophers have no theory of truth no general opinion on the notion of truth neither explicit nor implicit which distinguishes them as a group from philosophers p 159 the misconception that non philosophers adhere explicitly or implicitly to a definite type of opinion on the notion of truth is primarily due to an ignorance of the extreme diversity of opinion found among non philosophers as soon as they are invited to speak about the notion of truth secondarily the misconception is due to belief in intuitively obtained information as to the essence of the philosophic attitude towards things in general the attitude of non philosophers towards the notion of truth has been deduced from alleged knowledge of their character and ideology a deduction of this kind is meaningless and impossible even if such knowledge should be available p 160 the advanced reasoning forum is pleased to make available in its classic reprints series this exact reproduction of the 1938 text
