Abraham Lincoln (February 12, 1809 – April 15, 1865) was an American lawyer, politician, and statesman who served as the 16th president of the United States from 1861 until his assassination in 1865. He led his country through a tumultuous period and played an instrumental role in abolishing slavery while preserving the union as the 16th president of the United States. A self-taught lawyer, legislator, and vocal opponent of slavery, he was elected 16th president of the United States in November 1860, shortly before the outbreak of the Civil War. He became the United States' 16th president in 1861, issuing the Emancipation Proclamation that declared forever free those slaves within the Confederacy in 1863. Lincoln warned the South in his first inaugural address: "In your hands, my dissatisfied fellow countrymen, and not in mine, is the momentous issue of civil war. The government will not assail you. You have a great future ahead of you. I look for the government to meet your expectations." Lincoln was born on February 12, 1809, near Hodgenville, Kentucky. He moved to Indiana in 1816 and to Illinois in 1830 after working as a storekeeper, a rail splitter, a postmaster, and a surveyor. He enlisted as a volunteer in the 6th Illinois Cavalry Regiment during the Mexican-American War. He was elected to the U.S. House of Representatives in 1846 and served until 1849. He was elected to the U.S. Senate in 1850 but resigned in 1855 to accept a nomination for the presidency. He was elected to the presidency in 1860. He was assassinated on April 15, 1865, in Washington, D.C. He is buried in Springfield, Illinois.
