traditionally in general studies of the first world war the middle east is an arena of combat that has been portrayed in romanticised terms in stark contrast to the mud blood and presumed futility of the western front battles fought in egypt palestine mesopotamia and arabia offered a different narrative on the great war one in which the agency of individual figures was less neutered by heavy artillery as with the historiography of the western front which has been the focus of sustained inquiry since the mid 1960s such assumptions about the middle east have come under revision in the last two decades a reflection of an emerging global turn in the history of the first world war the sideshow theatres of the great war africa the middle east eastern europe and the pacific have come under much greater scrutiny from historians the fifteen chapters in this volume cover a broad range of perspectives on the first world war in the middle east from strategic planning issues wrestled with by statesmen through to the experience of religious communities trying to survive in war zones the chapter authors look at their specific topics through a global lens relating their areas of research to wider arguments on the history of the first world war the inviolability of the american mainland breached on 9 11 2001 for the first time since 1812 led to extravagant proclamations by the pundits it was a sudden menace confronting the twenty first century an event of unprecedented dimensions a new world historical turning point tariq ali challenges these assumptions arguing instead that what we have experienced is the return of history in a horrific form with religious symbols playing a part on both sides allah s revenge god is on our side god bless america the war against terror is a clash of fundamentalisms religious versus imperial each is honored by time honored features a shameless use of disproportional military power by one and a carefully targeted fanaticism by its other the two forces are hardly equal one is a product of despair the other is an empire whose ability to go to war is a chilling reminder of its place in the world contemporary politics is conducted and presented in the elitist style of intelligence agencies disinformation false information exaggeration of enemy strength and capability explanation of a tv image with a brazen lie and censorship the aim is to delude and disarm the citizenry everything is either over simplified or reduced to a wearisome incomprehensibility this wide ranging book blends history literature politics and autobiography to challenge the conformist culture of our times ali argues that many of the values proclaimed by the enlightenment retain their relevance while portrayals of the american empire as a new emancipatory project are fatally misguided
