the decisions courts make in constitutional rights cases pervade our political life and touch on our most basic interests and values the spread of judicial review of legislation around the world means that courts are increasingly called on to settle matters of moral and political controversy including assisted suicide data privacy anti terrorism measures marriage and abortion but doubts regarding the institutional capacities of courts for deciding such questions are growing judges now regularly review social science research to assess whether a law will effectively achieve its aim and at what cost to other interests they cite studies and statistical information from psychology sociology medicine and other disciplines in which they are rarely trained this empirical reasoning proceeds alongside open ended moral reasoning with judges employing terms such as equality liberty and autonomy then determining what these require in concrete circumstances this book shows that courts were not designed for this kind of moral and empirical reasoning it argues that in comparison to legislatures the institutional capacities of courts are deficient legislatures are better equipped than courts for deliberating and decision making in regard to the kinds of factual and moral issues that arise in constitutional rights cases the book concludes by considering the implications of comparative institutional capacity for constitutional design is a system of judicial review of legislation something that constitutional framers should choose to adopt if so in what form for countries with systems of judicial review practical proposals are made to remedy deficiencies in the institutional capacities of courts
