The County Court Manual

2016-05-16

the link between courts and the public is the written word with rare exceptions it is through judicial opinions that courts communicate with litigants lawyers other courts and the community whatever the court's statutory and constitutional status the written word in the end is the source and the measure of the court's authority it is therefore not enough that a decision be correct—it must also be fair and reasonable and readily understood the burden of the judicial opinion is to explain and to persuade and to satisfy the world that the decision is principled and sound what the court says and how it says it is as important as what the court decides it is important to the reader but it is also important to the author because in the writing lies the test of the thinking that underlies it —good writing — ambrose bierce said —essentially is clear thinking made visible — ambrose bierce write it right 6 rev ed 1986
