excerpt from admission and discharge of children monograph ii to accompany round table plan for trustees of institutions for dependent children in order to decide just what treatment is needed by the child it is necessary to make a diagnosis and this diagnosis can only be made efficiently through a careful and intelligent case study this case study must be made by a trained and competent observer with the assistance of experts in medicine and psychology it will involve a study of the family history of the child including grandparents parents brothers and sisters in order to determine the facts of heredity and of home and family influences affecting the child it will involve also the environment education and training of the child himself efficient case study requires a complete medical examination quite as thorough as would be required for life insurance it should include the condition of all of the organs and functions of the body including eyes ears nose throat skin and teeth and a complete record should be made of the results for all children above the age of three years there should be a psychological examination by the use of the binet simon tests for the purpose of ascertaining as nearly as possible the mental endowment of the child these tests should be checked by the observations of superintendents matrons and teachers who may have had the child under extended supervision in the case of older children it is desirable to use additional tests which have been devised for the determination of border line cases physicians and psychologists are learning to distinguish between those mental defects which are born with the child or are acquired in early childhood and which constitute feeble mindedness in some one of its grades and those defects which result from neglect cruelty malnutrition adenoids imperfect hearing or vision and which are presumably remediable by treatment psychological tests may reveal the existence of mental defects but do not determine their causes while feeble mindedness may be clearly and definitely recognized in the great majority of cases there is a considerable number of cases in which the question can not be settled offhand but only after care ful and extended observation sometimes unpromising children make surprising development under favorable conditions it is a great injustice to class a child as feeble minded until all doubt as to his condition has been settled on the other hand it is a great unkindness and a great extravagance as well to nag and worry a feeble minded child in a fruitless effort to develop in him mental faculties which he does not possess about the publisher forgotten books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books find more at forgottenbooks.com this book is a reproduction of an important historical work forgotten books uses state of the art technology to digitally reconstruct the work preserving the original format whilst repairing imperfections present in the aged copy in rare cases an imperfection in the original such as a blemish or missing page may be replicated in our edition we do however repair the vast majority of imperfections successfully any imperfections that remain are intentionally left to preserve the state of such historical works
