an argument that children are born to assign structures to their ambient language yielding a view of language variation not based on parameters defined at ug in this book david lightfoot argues that just as some birds are born to chirp humans are born to parse predisposed to assign linguistic structures to their ambient external language this approach to language acquisition makes two contributions to the development of minimalist thinking first it minimizes grammatical theory dispensing with three major entities parameters an evaluation metric for the selection of grammars and any independent parsing mechanism instead lightfoot argues children parse their ambient external language using their internal language universal grammar is open consistent with what children learn through parsing with their internal language system second this understanding of language acquisition yields a new view of variable properties in language properties that occur only in certain languages under the open ug vision very specific language particularities arise in response to new parses both external and internal languages play crucial interacting roles unstructured amorphous external language is parsed and an internal language system results lightfoot explores case studies that show such innovative parses of external language in the history of english development of modal verbs loss of verb movement and nineteenth century changes in the syntax of the verb to be he then discusses how children learn through parsing the role of parsing at the

with the insights she has gleaned from her close and subtle observation of parent teacher conferences renowned harvard university professor sara lawrence lightfoot has written a wise useful book about the ways in which parents and teachers can make the most of their essential conversation the dialogue between the most vital people in a child s life the essential conversation is the crucial exchange that occurs between parents and teachers a dialogue that takes place more than one hundred million times a year across our country and is both mirror of and metaphor for the larger cultural forces that define family school relationships and shape the development of our children participating in this twice yearly ritual so friendly and benign in its apparent goals parents and teachers are often wracked with anxiety in a meeting marked by decorum and politeness they frequently exhibit wariness and assume defensive postures even though the conversation appears to be focused on the student adults may find themselves playing out their own childhood histories insecurities and fears through vivid portraits and parables sara lawrence lightfoot captures the dynamics of this complex intense relationship from the perspective of both parents and teachers she also identifies new principles and practices for improving family school relationships in a voice that combines the passion of a mother the skepticism of a social scientist and the keen understanding of one of our nation s most admired educators lawrence lightfoot offers penetrating analysis and an urgent call to arms for all those who want to act in the best interests of their children for parents and teachers who seek productive dialogues and collaborative alliances in support of the learning and growth of their children this book will offer valuable insights incisive lessons and deft guidance on how to communicate more effectively in the essential conversation sara lawrence lightfoot brings scholarship warmth and wisdom to an immensely important cultural subject the way we raise our children
