this book examines the threat of a terrorist organisation constructing and detonating a nuclear bomb it explores the role and impact of the organisational design of a terrorist organisation in implementing a nuclear terrorism plot in order to do so the work builds on the organisational analogy between an assumed nuclear terrorism scenario and four case studies as follows the construction of the first atomic bombs at los alamos south africa s peaceful nuclear explosives pne program aum shinrikyo s chemical biological armament activities and al qaeda s implementation of the 9 11 attacks extrapolating insights from these case studies this book introduces the idea of an effectiveness efficiency trade off on the one hand it will be argued that a more organic organisational design is likely to benefit the effective implementation of a nuclear terrorism project on the other hand this type of organic organisational design is also likely to simultaneously constitute an inefficient way for a terrorist organisation to guarantee its operational and organisational security it follows then that the implementation of a nuclear terrorism plot via an organic organisational design is also likely to be an inefficient strategy for a terrorist organisation to achieve its strategic and political goals this idea of an effectiveness efficiency trade off provides us with a tool to strengthen the comprehensive nature of future nuclear terrorism threat assessments and sheds new light on the ongoing debates within the nuclear terrorism literature this book will be of particular interest to students of nuclear proliferation terrorism studies international organisations and security studies in general the idea of human dominion over nature has become entrenched by the dominant rights based interpretation of private property accordingly nature is not attributed any inherent value and becomes merely the matter of a human property relationship earth jurisprudence private property and the environment explores how an alternative conception of property might be instead grounded in the ecocentric concept of an earth community recognising that human beings are deeply interconnected with and dependent on nature this concept is proposed as a standard and measure for human law this book argues that the anthropocentric institution of private property needs to be reconceived drawing on international case law indigenous views of property and the land use practices of agrarian communities peter burdon considers how private property can be reformulated in a way that fosters duties towards nature using the theory of earth jurisprudence as a guide he outlines an alternative ecocentric description of private property as a relationship between and among members of the earth community this book will appeal to those researching in law justice and ecology as well as anyone pursuing an interest more particularly in earth jurisprudence the industrial era organizations used dualistic leadership theory which regarded followers as objects of leaders influence to socialize them into passive followership irrespective of context and outcome consequently organizations focused on leadership and condemned active followership as a toxic behavior that sabotages organizational processes and outcomes however the emergence of relational leadership theory in the information era flattened organizational structure which created a greater need for collaboration within and across sectors in this new era organizations cannot survive without responsible individuals who could be productive as both leaders and followers as a result organizations are experiencing high demand for active followership throughout organizational ranks roles and relationships nonetheless since followership studies are still in their infancy there is hardly any information on how followers develop and enact active followership whereas some studies established followership identity role and behaviors and identified factors influencing their development none has explored how they do so this study offers a theory of followership development and enactment anchored in a seamless paradigm that can be used to expand leadership theory beyond dualistic tendencies that absolutized the differences among leadership variables despite their seamlessness therefore it enhances organizational desire and capacity to develop and engage star followers effectively
