the stories legends and folk tales of the bible have influenced our literature our art our drama our music our traditions our politics our sense of values and our culture familiarity with these stories is important not because they are sacred stories that should be taken as literally true but because they are important culturally to those of us who are the inheritors and beneficiaries of the judaeo christian religious tradition that has made such a significant impact on the culture of the western world the themes and images in these stories are reflected in the artifacts of our culture our literature our art our music and we would be aesthetically and intellectually impoverished without a working acquaintance with them warning as in other myths and legends of the ancient world there is violence rape incest and murder in these stories the target audience is high school and above imagine the forest as darkness falls the somber beeches disappear in misty twilight and shadows seem to gather under their branches far away the blackbird s call tells of the coming of the night the birds cease their singing silence descends soon the beasts of the night will make their appearance between tangled roots hidden by nettles and brambles the earth seems to ripple a few humps of earth seem to emerge from the ground they are the last traces of burial mounds of mounds which were tall and high 2500 years ago many of them have disappeared hidden by tangled roots of beech and oak ploughed flat by careless farmers others again show caved in tops where grave robbers have looted the central chamber the locals shun these hills there are tales that strange fires can be seen glowing on the mounds and that on spooky nights great armed warriors arise from their resting places then the doors to the deep are thrown open and unwary travelers have to beware of being invited into the halls of the dead and unborn here the kings of the deep feast and celebrate time passes differently and strange treasures may be found who knows the nights when the gates are open who carries the primrose the wish flower the strange blossom that opens the doors to the hollow hills folk gothic begins with the assertion that a significant part of what has been categorised as folk horror is more accurately and usefully labelled as folk gothic through the modifier folk folk gothic obviously shares with folk horror its deployment and frequent fabrication of diegetic folklore folk gothic does not share however folk horror s incarnate monsters its forward impetus across spatial and ontological boundaries and the shock and repulsion elicited through its bodily violence the author argues that the folk gothic as a literary televisual and cinematic formation is defined by particular temporal and spatial structures that serve to forge distinctly nonhuman stories in emphasising these temporal and spatial structures not literal folk and monsters the folk gothic tells stories that foreground land and things consequently loosening the grip of anthropocentrism

this is a book about the reality of place in america the events and influences that led to the america we recognize today it is a book about the growth of american cities and their suburbs during the twentieth century about institutions and metropolitan governance about real estate development and finance about housing and the lack of it about the emergence and perhaps the eventual debilitation of cities and suburbs alike incorporating the thinking of visionary city planners and land use economists the author presents a lucid primer on the economics of land its development and usage and on how things actually get done in the real estate industry between folk and liturgy the title of this collection should not be understood to refer to some fixed point some stable place between the two extremes of an illiterate and a literate culture rather the title flags the wide and colourful spectrum of medieval dramatic possibility perhaps except one none of the ten essays published here deal with a drama existing purely at either end of this scale they add to our impression of the teaming fecundity and hybridism of early european drama an impression that grows apace once we start to consider dramas situated between folk and liturgy the geographical terrain that the essays traverse ranges from the british isles in the west to poland in the east the suppleness of the approaches taken here is the minimum critical requirement of anyone wanting to do justice to so complex and multifold a phenomenon as is early european drama focusing on the lineage of pivotal african american and irish women writers jacqueline fulmer argues that these authors often employ strategies of indirection via folkloric expression when exploring unpopular topics this strategy holds the attention of readers who would otherwise reject the subject matter fulmer traces the line of descent from mary lavin to Éilís ní dhuibhne and from zora neale hurston to toni morrison showing how obstacles to free expression though varying from those lavin and hurston faced are still encountered by morrison and ní dhuibhne the basis for comparing these authors lies in the strategies of indirection they use as influenced by folklore the folkloric characters these authors depict wild denizens of the otherworld and wise women of various traditions help their creators insert controversy into fiction in ways that charm rather than alienate readers forms of rhetorical indirection that appear in the context of folklore such as signifying practices masking sly civility and the grotesque or bizarre come out of the mouths and actions of these writers magical and magisterial characters old traditions can offer new ways of discussing issues such as sexual expression religious beliefs or issues of reproduction as differences between times and cultures affect what can and cannot be said folkloric indirection may open up a vista to discourses of which we as readers may not even be aware finally the folk women of morrison ní dhuibhne hurston and lavin open up new points of entry to the discussion of fiction rhetoric censorship and folklore as paris is france so seoul may be said to be korea for it is the centre from which nearly every thing for the country either originates or is disseminated officers ruling over country districts usually have their house in town and expect to spend a portion at least of their time within the walls of the capital while some of the provincial capitals are said to contain more people and to be more celebrated for certain reasons seoul is the home of the king and the mecca of his faithful subjects a description of this city may therefore answer for all the capital is a city of some 300 000 inhabitants half of whom perhaps live in the extensive suburbs without the walls it lies in a basin of granite sand surrounded by high mountains and their projecting ridges over which climbs the high thick encircling wall of masonry pierced at convenient points by massive pagoda roofed gates amply strong enough for defense against the weapons of war in use at the time of building this great relic of seclusion the city is traversed by broad avenues from which runs a perfect labyrinth of narrow streets originally none of these streets were less than twenty feet wide and some of the avenues leading up to the imposing gates of the palaces are even now a good two hundred feet in width but the streets have all been encroached upon by the little temporary thatched booths of the petty retail dealers so that with the exception of the approaches to the palaces the line is broken the streets made tortuous and only here and there a broad open spot indicates the original width of the thoroughfare originally every street was furnished with its sewer open in the smaller streets while the avenues were drained by great covered sewers of stonework occasionally the proprietor of one of the little temporary booths would put a foundation under his structure bridging over the sewer until now the streets have in many cases become mere crooked alleys and but for the bountiful rains the excellent natural drainage and the character of the soil the mortality would be very great instead of being less than in ordinary american cities no attempt is made towards street decoration as that would attract the attention of thieves the magnificent grounds of a nobleman with their artificial lakes flower gardens water worn pillars of ancient rock and quaintly twisted trees may be enclosed by a row of tumble down smoke begrimed servant quarters that would never indicate the beauty to be found hidden within its forbidding exterior generating a new understanding of the past as well as a vision for the future this path breaking volume contains essays written by playwrights scholars and critics that analyze african american theatre as it is practiced today even as they acknowledge that black experience is not monolithic these contributors argue provocatively and persuasively for a black consciousness that creates a culturally specific theatre this theatre rooted in an african mythos offers ritual rather than realism it transcends the specifics of social relations reaching toward revelation the ritual performance that is intrinsic to black theatre renews the community in paul carter harrison s words it reveals the form of things unknown in a way that binds cleanses and heals
