in this classic study alan brudner investigates the basic structure of the common law of transactions for decades that structure has been the subject of intense debate between formalists who say that transactional law is a private law for interacting parties and functionalists who say that it is a public law serving the collective ends of society against both camps brudner proposes a synthesis of formalism and functionalism in which private law is modified by a common good without being subservient to it drawing on hegel s legal philosophy the author exhibits this synthesis in each of transactional law s main divisions property contract unjust enrichment and tort each is a whole composed of private law and public law parts that complement each other and the idea connecting the parts to each other is also latently present in each moreover brudner argues a single narrative thread connects the divisions of transactional law to each other not a row of disconnected fields transactional law is rather a story about the realization in law of the agent s claim to be a dignified end master of its body its acquisitions and the shape of its life transactional law s divisions are stages in the progress toward that goal each generating a potential developed by the next thus contract law fulfils what is incompletely realized in property law negligence law what is germinal in contract law public insurance what is seminal in negligence law and transactional law as a whole what is underdeveloped in public insurance the end point is the limit of what a transactional law can contribute to a life sufficient for dignity reconfigured and expanded with a contribution by jennifer nadler the unity of the common law stands out among contemporary theories of private law in that it depicts private law as purposive without being instrumental and as autonomous without being empty formal how do societies negotiate the apparently competing agendas of environmental protection and social justice why do some countries perform much better than others on this front democracy in the woods addresses these question by examining land rights conflicts and the fate of forest dependent peasants in the context of the different forest property regimes in india tanzania and mexico these three countries are prominent in the scholarship and policy debates about national forest policies and land conflicts associated with international support for nature conservation this unique comparative study of national forestland regimes challenges the received wisdom that redistributive policies necessarily undermine the goals of environmental protection it shows instead that the form that national environmental protection efforts take either inclusive as in mexico or exclusive as in tanzania and for the most part in india depends on whether dominant political parties are compelled to create structures of political intermediation that channel peasant demands for forest and land rights into the policy process this book offers three different tests of this theory of political origins of forestland regimes first it explains why it took the indian political elites nearly sixty years to introduce meaningful reforms of the colonial era forestland regimes second it successfully explains the rather counterintuitive local outcomes of the programs for formalization of land rights in india tanzania and mexico third it provides a coherent explanation of why each of these three countries proposes a significantly different distribution of the benefits of forest based climate change mitigation programs being developed under the auspices of the united nations in its political analysis of the control over and the use of nature this book opens up new avenues for reflecting on how legacies of the past and international interventions interject into domestic political processes to produce specific configurations of environmental protection and social justice democracy in the woods offers a theoretically rigorous argument about why and in what specific ways politics determine the prospects of a socially just and environmentally secure world included in the studies in comparative energy and environmental politics series this book explores the economic coping practices of rural widows in the aftermath of the cambodian civil war war produces a preponderance of widows often young widows with small children in their care rural widows must feed their families and educate their children despite rural poverty and the lack of opportunities for women the economics of widowhood is therefore a significant social problem in less developed countries the widows predominant economic plan was to combine rice cultivation with an assortment of microenterprises a rice plus strategy many widows were unable to grow enough rice on their land to feed their families they filled the hunger gap by raising cash through microenterprises to purchase additional rice gender work roles were both permeable and persistent allowing a flexible sexual division of labor in the short run but maintaining traditional roles in the long run most widows called on relatives or exchanged transplanting labor for male plowing services although a few women took up the plow themselves the study also explores widows access to key economic resources such as land credit and education war decimated widows family support networks including the loss of children their social security the study concludes that cambodia s gender arrangement offered many economic options to widows but also devalued their labor in a cultural structure of inequality gender poverty and war interacted to reduce widows financial resources accounting for their economic vulnerability
