many studies have concluded that the effects of early industrialization on traditional craftworkers were largely negative robert b kristofferson demonstrates however that in at least one area this was not the case craft capitalism focuses on hamilton ontario and demonstrates how the preservation of traditional work arrangements craft mobility networks and other aspects of craft culture ensured that craftworkers in that city enjoyed an essentially positive introduction to industrial capitalism kristofferson argues that as former craftworkers themselves the majority of the city s industrial proprietors helped their younger counterparts achieve independence conflict rooted in capitalist class experience while present was not yet dominant furthermore he argues while craftworkers experience of the change was more informed by the residual cultures of craft than by the emergent logic of capitalism craft culture in hamilton was not retrogressive rather this situation served as a centre of social creation in ways that built on the positive aspects of both systems based on extensive archival research this controversial and engaging study offers unique insight to the process of industrialization and class formation in canada
