this book argues for a more moderate approach to history writing in international criminal adjudication by articulating the elements of a responsible history normative framework the question of whether international criminal courts and tribunals ought to write historical narratives has gained renewed relevance in the context of the recent turn to history in international criminal law the growing attention to the historical legacies of the ad hoc tribunals and the minimal attention paid to historical context in the first judgment of the international criminal court the starting point for this discussion is that in cases of mass atrocities prosecutors and judges are inevitably understood to be engaged in writing history and influencing collective memory whether or not they so intend therefore while writing history is an inescapable feature of icts there is still today a significant lack of consensus over the proper place of this function since hannah arendt articulated her doctrine of strict legality in response to the prosecutor s expansive didactic approach in eichmann the legal debate on the subject has been largely polarised between restrictive and expansive approaches to history writing in mass atrocity trials what has been noticeably missing from this debate is the middle ground the contribution this book seeks to make is precisely to articulate a framework that occupies that ground the book asks what are the lenses through which judges of icts interpret historical events what kind of histories do icts write and what kinds of histories should icts produce its arguments for a more moderate approach to history writing are based on three distinct but interrelated grounds 1 truth and justice 2 right to truth and 3 legal epistemology different target audiences may benefit from this book court officials and legal practitioners may find the normative framework developed herein useful in addressing the tensions between the competing objectives of icts and in particular in assessing the value of the history writing function lawyers historians and other academics may also find the analysis of the strengths constraints and blind spots of the historical narratives written by icts interesting this issue is particularly timely in view of current debates on the legacies of icts aldo zammit borda is director of the centre for access to justice and inclusion at anglia ruskin university cambridge uk

this book confronts the problem of the legal uncertainty surrounding the definition and classification of ethnic cleansing exploring whether the use of the term ethnic cleansing constitutes a valuable contribution to legal understanding and praxis the premise underlying this book is that acts of ethnic cleansing are first and foremost a criminal issue and must therefore be precisely placed within the context of the international law order in particular it addresses the question of the specificity of the act and its relation to existing categories of international crime exploring the relationship between ethnic cleansing and genocide but also extending to war crimes and crimes against humanity the book goes on to show how the current understanding of ethnic cleansing singularly fails to provide an efficient instrument for identification and argues that the act in having its own distinctive characteristics conditions and exigencies ought to be granted its own classification as a specific independent crime ethnic cleansing a legal qualification will be of particular interest to students and scholars of international law and political science a brief historical account of the background leading to the publication of the first four editions of the world directory of crystallographers was presented by g boom in his preface to the fourth edition published late in 1971 that edition was produced by traditional typesetting methods from compilations of biographical data prepared by national sub editors the major effort required to produce a directory by manual methods provided the impetus to use computer techniques for the fifth edition the account of the production of the first computer assisted directory was described by s c abrahams in the preface of the fifth edition computer composition which required a machine readable data base offered several major advantages the choice of typeface and range of characters was flexible corrections and additions to the data base were rapid and once established it was hoped updating for future editions would be simple and inexpensive the data base was put to other union uses such as preparation of mailing labels and formulation of lists of crystallographers with specified common fields of interest the fifth edition of the world directory of crystallographers was published in june of 1977 the sixth in may of 1981 the subject indexes for the fifth and sixth editions were printed in 1978 and 1981 respectively both having a limited distribution there has been a quiet revolution over the course of the past quarter century in the prosecution of individuals for war crimes before international courts until recently and with a few notable exceptions in the wake of world war ii violations of the laws of war and international humanitarian law were addressed primarily as claims between states however this approach has changed radically in just the last twenty years as the international community has increasingly accepted the idea of individual criminal responsibility for violations of international humanitarian law the international criminal tribunals for the former yugoslavia and rwanda have played a key role in this transformation and as the trailblazers for a growing number of new international or hybrid criminal courts in establishing the field of international criminal justice and encouraging the national prosecution of war crimes understanding the tribunals origins their ground breaking jurisprudence and how they have addressed critical legal and practical challenges is essential to understanding both the revolution that has occurred over the past twenty years and how international criminal law will change and grow in the years ahead as a leading scholar on humanitarian law past president of the international criminal tribunal for the former yugoslavia and appeals judge for both the yugoslavia and rwanda tribunals theodor meron has observed and influenced the development of international criminal law as it has evolved from a mostly academic exercise to a cornerstone of the new international legal order in this collection of speeches delivered during his first decade on the bench he offers an insightful overview of the foundations of international criminal law as well as a unique insider's perspective on the challenges faced by international criminal tribunals their creation of a corpus of substantive and procedural law regarding everything from sentencing and self representation to the law of genocide and the protection of prisoners of war the contributions of other international courts and the responsibilities of international jurists judge meron s personal reflections and unparalleled experience in international criminal justice make this volume as rewarding for experts as it is for the general public the world has witnessed several revolutions since the dawn of industrial revolution some two centuries ago during the current century itself three revolutions in the area of communication information processing and quality have taken place and each time the standard of living of man improved beyond predictions but during the same period the world population has also phenomenally increased dwarfing the gains achieved from the development increased level of industrial activity to meet the of humanity has caused irreversible damage to the pristine environment that the demand earth once had economic disparity between the haves and havenots has widened aggravating the situation further more ozone layer depletion warming up of earth s atmosphere and the pollution created by uncontrolled industrial activity to gain economic strength are now assuming the proportion of a catastrophe that may eventually threaten the survival of life on earth developed countries blame the third world countries for the uncontrolled emissions through burning of fossil fuels and for wasting precious resources of energy by using inefficient and uneconomical technologies while the developed countries are equally responsible for avoidable over consumption and for the wastage of resources and energy and for not sharing the improved and efficient technologies with the developing countries thus the wastage by both these set of countries continues unabated after all resources of the world are finite and are meant to be shared by all its inhabitants
