Pluralism, Justice, and Equality 1995-04-06 how should we approach the daunting task of renewing the ideal of equality in this book christine synowich proposes a theory of equality centred on human flourishing or wellbeing she argues that egalitarianism should be understood as seeking to make people more equal in the constituents of a good life inequality is a social ill because of the damage it does to human flourishing unequal distribution of wealth can have the effect that some people are poorly housed badly nourished ill educated unhappy or uncultured among other things when we seek to make people more equal our concern is not just resources or property but how people fare under one distribution or another ultimately the best answer to the question equality of what is some conception of flourishing since whatever policies or principles we adopt it is flourishing that we hope will be more equal as a result of our endeavours synowich calls for both retrieval and innovation what is to be retrieved is the ideal of equality itself which is often assumed as a background condition of theories of justice yet at the same time dismissed as too homogenising abstract and rigid a criterion for political argument we must retrieve the ideal of equality as a central political principle in doing so she casts doubt on the value of focussing on cultural difference and rejects the idea of neutrality that dominates contemporary political philosophy in favour of a view of the state as enabling the betterment of its citizens

Education, Justice and the Human Good 2014-05-16 unless considered on a practical level where a precise distribution of social goods is chosen john rawls's and gerald cohen's approaches to social justice cannot be complementary their disagreement about justice and its principles calls for a choice which opts either for the rawlsian theory or for the cohenian one what is the more plausible approach to social justice this work compares both approaches and aims to defend cohen's position in the light of two considerations it answers the philosophical question about the analysis of the idea of justice which puts the virtue of justice in its philosophical context it however presents a method everyone can apply in order to arrive at the fundamental principles of justice by employing the power of reason an analysis of the concept of justice based on the power of reason should seek to uncover the ultimate nature of justice which is independent of facts and of other virtues once exposed the understanding of justice arrived at should inform social institutions and determine people's daily decisions a just society is therefore a society where just persons and just institutions exhibit the virtue of justice
