ethical to the problematic of the text as a post or a sending in the work of derrida lyotard lacan kristeva and foucault and phrasing the ethical as the questions of how to read and write after a comprehensive study of israel s most internationally celebrated writer process theism in a variety of manifestations and modifications stemming from whitehead s original suggestions dominates discussions of philosophical and natural theology in europe and america in transforming process theism ford argues that subsequent modifications of whitehead s original line of thought mask a fundamental and unresolved aporia in that original proposal since only past or objectified determinate events can influence present experiences and since god as conceived by whitehead is never fully determinate or objectifiable as a past event it is difficult to see how this divine persuasive power can have any influence on the present as a source of creativity and genuinely new possibilities for enactment ford meticulously reconstructs and evaluates whitehead s own versions of theism and he critically appraises the most influential subsequent modifications of these unrecognized variants by other process thinkers he recovers the original trajectory of whitehead s continuous revision of his conception of god and forges an appropriate solution to this central aporia he concludes that consistent with whitehead s overarching metaphysical principles there is another kind of causal influence that does not require objectification and is the opposite of past determinateness the future conceived as active offers an account of subjectivity which is both universal and transcendent god according to ford s revisions must be understood as this particular but indefinite creativity or universal activity of the future bestowing subjectivity on each present occasion of experience without ever becoming determinate examines the influence of shintoism confucianism buddhism and zen buddhism on japanese ethics with implications for our understanding of various social economic and environmental problems philosophical reflections on the phenomenon of globalization provides an ontological characterization of texts explores the issues raised by the identity of various texts and presents a view of the function of authors and audiences and of their relations to texts uses psychoanalysis to reconsider cultural studies with a focus on wholeness and integration in europe both the public and private sector organizations focused on the outflow of jobs and the rise in unemployment due to high labor costs high public support program costs and the failure of the european community to become a common market in asia japan underwent a large emigration of production offshore due to the high yen to dollar ratio a lengthy recession and a massive government aid program which failed drawing on examples from contemporary life woodward explores rhetorical conditions that create powerful moments of identification illustrated with interesting examples drawn from politics and art the idea of identification draws on classical social and rhetorical theories to establish a systematic framework for understanding the varieties and forms of identification woodward references a variety of contexts in contemporary life to explore the rhetorical conditions that create powerful and captivating moments by invoking the influential ideas of kenneth burke george herbert mead joshua meyorowitz and others he shows how the rhetorical process of identification is separate from psychological theories of identity construction woodward concludes with an argument that film theory has perhaps offered the most vivid descriptive categories for understanding the bonds of identification systematic comparison of sartre and adorno that focuses on their theories of the subject focusing on idealists and visionaries who believed that justice could reign in our world this
