afghanistan has long been one of the world's most war torn countries beginning in ancient times one invader after another tried to conquer it but only a few succeeded and even those who did seize the country did so with tremendous difficulty in part this is because the afghans are tough independent minded folk who do not like being told what to do by foreign intruders indeed they are proud of their traditional customs including their main religion islam and their native literature and music yet while they often fight to maintain their time honored way of life many of them are willing to try some new ideas after us forces helped them expel the brutal taliban in 2002 for example the afghans installed a democratic government it still struggles to control all of the country s far flung tribes but a majority of afghans hope that it will eventually bring their ancient land unity peace and prosperity cultural imperialism and the indo english novel focuses on the novels of r k narayan anita desai kamala markandaya and salman rushdie and explores the tension in these novels between ideology and the generic fictive strategies that shape ideology or are shaped by it fawzia afzal khan raises the important question of how much the usage of certain ideological strategies actually helps the ex colonized writer deal effectively with postcolonial and postindependence trauma and whether or not the choice of a particular genre or mode employed by a writer presupposes the extent to which that writer will be successful in challenging the ideological strategies of containment perpetuated by most western orientalist texts and writers she argues that the formal or generic choices of the four writers studied here reveal that they are using genre as an ideological strategy of liberation to help free their peoples and cultures from the hegemonic strategies of containment imposed upon them she concludes that the works studied here constitute an ideological rebuttal of western writers denigrating containment of non western cultures she also notes that self criticism as implied in rushdie s works is not to be confused with self hatred a theme found in naipaul s work
