middle aged women and anyone who hopes to understand them dr tsesis describes the path he traversed from religious ignorance to strong belief in the jewish religion tsesis assigns a special place to the proof of his conclusion that religion and science especially in light of recent discoveries are not antagonists and are in fact in complete harmony supplementing and not excluding each other in the spirit of ecumenism tsesis speaks about coexistence of different religions which share the common objective of assurance of perpetual survival of the human race the unifying theme of this book however is the beauty of the jewish religion and a possible answer to the question of why we remain jews how we feel is as vital to our survival as how we think this claim based on the premise that emotions are largely adaptive serves as the organizing theme of why we need religion this book is a novel pathway in a well trodden field of religious studies and philosophy of religion stephen asma argues that like art religion has direct access to our emotional lives in ways that science does not yes science can give us emotional feelings of wonder and the sublime we can feel the sacred depths of nature but there are many forms of human suffering and vulnerability that are beyond the reach of help from science different emotional stresses require different kinds of rescue unlike secular authors who praise religion s ethical and civilizing function asma argues that its core value lies in its emotionally therapeutic power no theorist of religion has failed to notice the importance of emotions in spiritual and ritual life but truly systematic research has only recently delivered concrete data on the neurology psychology and anthropology of the emotional systems this very recent affective turn has begun to map out a powerful territory of embodied cognition why we need religion incorporates new data from these affective sciences into the philosophy of religion it goes on to describe the way in which religion manages those systems rage play lust care grief and so on finally it argues that religion is still the best cultural apparatus for doing this adaptive work in short the book is a darwinian defense of religious emotions and the cultural systems that manage them this work examines various organizational problems that contribute to the phenomenon of passive addiction problems so entrenched and quotidian that they no longer register in the organizational consciousness as problems passive addiction refers to the phenomenon in which the individual is addicted to various forms of passivity e g procrastination effortless and vacuous behaviors as refuge from work one dislikes xin an lucian lu and matthew c ramsey investigate the dichotomization between work and life ill designed evaluation the divorce between purpose and action overemphasis of extrinsic order the crisis of credibility and the overuse of management over leadership technological and economic changes in the future may lead to the emergence of active addiction a state of work that is blended with life and is actively embraced by the worker with a spirit of creativity and innovation many of us long to experience the fullness of god and his purpose for our lives not a whole lot of us ever do the reason is that we have departed in some significant ways from the biblical view of christian life and growth the new testament highlights the communal missional and eschatological aspects of our walk with god we grow in our faith as individual christians to the degree that we are a deeply rooted relationally in a local church community that is b passionately

how we feel is as vital to our survival as how we think this claim based on the premise that emotions are largely adaptive serves as the organizing theme of why we need religion this book is a novel pathway in a well trodden field of religious studies and philosophy of religion stephen asma argues that like art religion has direct access to our emotional lives in ways that science does not yes science can give us emotional feelings of wonder and the sublime we can feel the sacred depths of nature but there are many forms of human suffering and vulnerability that are beyond the reach of help from science different emotional stresses require different kinds of rescue unlike secular authors who praise religion s ethical and civilizing function asma argues that its core value lies in its emotionally therapeutic power no theorist of religion has failed to notice the importance of emotions in spiritual and ritual life but truly systematic research has only recently delivered concrete data on the neurology psychology and anthropology of the emotional systems this very recent affective turn has begun to map out a powerful territory of embodied cognition why we need religion incorporates new data from these affective sciences into the philosophy of religion it goes on to describe the way in which religion manages those systems rage play lust care grief and so on finally it argues that religion is still the best cultural apparatus for doing this adaptive work in short the book is a darwinian defense of religious emotions and the cultural systems that manage them
