Central Asia: a New Great Game? 2013-02-02

is there a new great game being played out in central asia boris rumer argues that the successor states to the russian and british empires have renewed the struggle for hegemony in the center of the asian continent as the world shifts from a bipolar to a multipolar focus the nations of asia search for new trans regional security arrangements more specifically the breakup of the soviet union and the creation of five central asian republics kazakhstan kyrgyzstan uzbekistan turkmenistan and tajikistan have complicated the security relations of the asian states see figure 1 but this new struggle is not a repeat of the 19th century great game by which the central asian states are but pawns of great powers as they jockey for power and position instead the central asian states themselves are active players in this struggle for power in a unique geo strategic position to influence immediate neighbors russia china and iran and even beyond into the indian subcontinent once considered a backwater of little importance during the soviet era central asia could play a pivotal role in asian politics in the next decade enlargement and engagement set domestic political stability regional peace and the maturation of market economies in the five central asian states as policy goals of the united states the key to asian especially central asian regional security is economic a strong vibrant market economy is a prerequisite for political stability and the growth of democracy political stability however is itself a key element to economic development peace in the region especially in tajikistan afghanistan and kashmir must be gained before that economic takeoff can occur serious political economic ethnic religious and social challenges confront the five new central asian states in this quest for regional security how each state is able to confront and resolve these problems will determine its ability to emerge as a viable force in this struggle for influence in this new great game instability might seem to provide opportunities for states such as iran or china to expand their influence but the risks that such instability would ricochet back on them are too great thus iran pakistan india russia and china each seek in their own way to promote stability within central asia while expanding their own regional influence implications for american security from this struggle derive from the u s desire to prevent existing problems within central asia from escalating into crises that might engage iran pakistan india russia or china therefore we must first identify those centrifugal forces threatening central asia then review each of these states in turn to analyze their behavior identify their regional objectives and state policies in relation to central asia and evaluate the impact of central asia upon their own security doing so offers a better perspective on our own strategic interests in post cold war asia essay from the year 2018 in the subject politics international politics region south Asia university of Dhaka course geopolitics language English abstract this paper is based on the ongoing competition between China and India to influence over the South Asian region at the era of 21st century the world politics is frequently shifting and the actors are also changing their strategic national interests in this context the South Asian regions are also the part of strategic interests of regional as well as rising powers of world politics at present time China and India are both the key players in South Asian regions previously Pakistan was the main counterpart for India to achieve her strategic national interests but now instead of Pakistan the main counterpart for India in South Asian regions have become China India is regularly seen as a territorial power however a more intensive look uncovers that it is in a disadvantageous position opposite China in South Asia the primary reason is that Indian governments never had the political financial and military abilities to seek after their provincial power desire with their neighbors over the long haul South Asian nations could simply play the China card to avoid India's impact India's new South Asia arrangement with the attention on exchange and availability has enhanced provincial collaboration since 1991

there is a new great game being played in the Buddhist Himalayas between India China and Tibet which makes for a crucial third player together they are leveraging their influence with the Buddhist communities to create strategic dominance with varying degrees of success China's Buddhist diplomacy has focused on Nepal and Bhutan and the Indian Himalayan regions of Ladakh Arunachal Pradesh and Sikkim which have sizeable Buddhist populations and are vulnerable to this influence the crisis in Doklam brought into focus what will be one of the most difficult issues to unfold in the Himalayas in future India's insufficient ability to deal with China only through the prism of military power if Xi Jinping who is known to be working towards a resolution of the Tibet question succeeds and the Dalai Lama does indeed return to Tibet how will it impact Indian interests in the Buddhist Himalayas if the Tibet issue remains unresolved how will India and China deal with and leverage the sectarian strife that is likely to intensify in a post Dalai Lama world the great game in the Buddhist Himalayas includes several unknown insights into the India China India Tibet and China Tibet relationships it reads like a geopolitical thriller taking the reader through the intricacies of reincarnation politics competing spheres of sacred influence and monastic and sectarian allegiances that will keep the Himalayas on edge for years to come the great game in west asia examines the strategic competition between iran and turkey for power and influence in the south caucasus these neighboring middle east powers have vied for supremacy and influence throughout the region and especially in their immediate vicinity while contending with ethnic heterogeneity both within their own territories and across their borders turkey has long conceived of itself as not just a bridge between asia and europe but in more substantive terms as a central player in regional and global affairs if somewhat more modest in its public statements iran s parallel ambitions for strategic centrality and influence have only been masked by its own inarticulate foreign policy agendas and the repeated missteps of its revolutionary leaders but both have sought to deepen their regional influence and power and in the south caucasus each has achieved a modicum of success in fact as the contributions to this volume demonstrate as much of the world s attention has been diverted to conflicts and flashpoints near and far a new great game has been unravelling between iran and turkey in the south caucasus for the united states and other nations concerned with security in south and central asia one of the most ominous trends has been the growing influence of jihadist groups in pakistan which feel obligated to wage holy war against everything that they perceive as non islamic their objective would be a pakistani government similar to the taliban regime in afghanistan the danger this would pose to regional stability and u s interests is clear the author assesses jihadi groups from the framework of a new great game for influence in central asia involving an array of states he argues that if this competition leads to increased violence outside states including the united states could be drawn in on the other hand if the region stabilizes it could provide solid economic and political partners for the united states a well designed american strategy ahrari contends might help avoid crises or catastrophe ssi summary in january 1996 the u s army war college s strategic studies institute ssi and the center for strategic and international studies csis hosted a conference on asian security to the year 2000 one focus of the conferees was the growing relevance of events in central asia perhaps nowhere on the continent was the cold war transformation in the security environment more dramatic than in central asia there the sudden retraction of soviet power and decline in superpower competition was rapidly followed by the creation of new states whose prospects for legitimacy development and independent survival were at best uncertain the half decade that has followed the dissolution of the soviet union has not been sufficient time for any of the vast challenges facing central asia to have been addressed definitively nor can we be confident that a stable regional system has coalesced yet the past 5 years have produced an emerging pattern of relations amenable to tentative analysis that is the task lieutenant colonel dianne smith of ssi undertook for the asian security conference in this monograph she details the complex problems facing the region and then turns her attention to central asia s evolving security structure by involving the great game analogy she takes the perspective that for this part of the continent it is the nations surrounding the region that will play the primary role in shaping its future although the new central asian nations are participants not pawns in this struggle for influence colonel smith s analysis focuses on the interests and actions of five of those surrounding nations iran pakistan india russia and china each has significant interests in central asia and each thus far has tempered to some degree its actions to advance those interests in recognition of the competing objectives of the others for the united states a power vacuum in central asia seems a remote concern at first blush colonel smith s review makes clear however that the paramount american stake lies in helping to ensure that central asia does not become a game gone bad that draws the great asian powers into conflict her survey concludes with policy recommendations toward that end this is an important analysis of a key but little known region in the wider context of world politics central asia has huge oil and gas resources divided between five independent states kazakhstan kyrgyzstan tajikistan turkmenistan and uzbekistan each with their own problems and interests the region is energy rich and being situated between russia and china and close to afghanistan and other potential trouble spots it has acquired immense geo strategic importance concentrating on today s problems against a complex historical background the book draws on the author s extensive involvement with the region considerable attention is paid to central asian islam human rights issues in the region and central asia s place in the war against terrorism

for nearly a century the two most powerful nations on earth victorian britain and tsarist russia fought a secret war in the lonely passes and deserts of central asia those engaged in this shadowy struggle called it the great game a phrase immortalized by kipling when play first began the two rival empires lay nearly 2 000 miles apart by the end some russian outposts were within 20 miles of india this classic book tells the story of the great game through the exploits of the young officers both british and russian who risked their lives playing it disguised as holy men or native horse traders they mapped secret passes gathered intelligence and sought the allegiance of powerful khans some never returned the violent repercussions of the great game are still convulsing central asia today the great game refers to the hundred year geostrategic contest between britain and russia for control of eurasia in the 19th century the arena for the great game was all the lands kingdoms and nations between the two empires at the beginning of the great game the territories of british india and tsarist russia were separated by a distance of almost 1 500 miles at the end all that remained between the two was afghanistan which at its narrowest was a sliver of a 15 mile corridor agreed upon mutually by the two behemoths to keep them apart afghanistan emerged as a modern nation with its current territorial form during the era of the great game as a frontier state afghanistan was the stage on which the most powerful actors in this greatest geopolitical drama in the history of the world played their roles and left lasting legacies which resonate even in our age the nationalist historiography of afghanistan traces the origins of modern afghanistan to 1747 the year in which ahmad shah abdali established the durrani empire with its capital at kabul the british colonial state was emerged as a power in south asia not much later when the east india company acquired territorial rights in bengal after the battle of plassey in 1757 the first official diplomatic contact between the two was established in 1809 in the interceding half century or so the durrani empire had expanded up to the borders of delhi and subsequently shrunk to a much smaller core around the twin capitals of kabul and peshawar after which the british colonial state itself expanded to incorporate not just delhi but also territories beyond by the middle of the 19th century the british colonial state had expanded its borders further north across the punjab defeating and annexing the sikh empire from 1849 onwards afghanistan and the british in india were geopolitical neighbours and rivals the book traces the interactions between afghanistan and the emerging british power in india from the first contacts to the construction of the final territorial form of the region which come to be known as british india s northwest frontier excerpt in 1808 the governor general of the east india company despatched three embassies from india to secure a system of alliances with one single purpose to prevent the march of an overseas army from europe through the southern quadrant of middle asia into india at the turn of the 19th century the spectre of europe cast a shadow of unease over asia after the collapse of the french revolution europe had been gripped by war as french armies led napoleon bonaparte marched across european frontiers while the wars in europe are beyond the scope of this essay their effect on asian diplomacy and strategic thought about the defence of india is important in 1798 france had invaded egypt was there a possibility of an invasion of india napoleon bonaparte had after all openly proclaimed his intention of forging a pan asian empire i was full of dreams i saw myself founding a new religion marching into asia riding on an elephant a turban on my head and in my hands the new koran i would have written to suit my needs napoleon ultimately the french fleet in the mediterranean was destroyed by a british naval fleet even as the threats of continental war in europe continued to rage if there ever was to be a french invasion of india from egypt the plausible route would have been through the red sea and the arabian gulf or overland through persia possibly across afghanistan and further through punjab or sind the three embassies were tasked with building an alliance system to prevent this and secure india s frontiers for the british colonial state of the east india company excerpt from chapter 2 about the authorg s goraya is research fellow at the centre for the study of geopolitics at the department of political science panjab university india the game motif is useful as a metaphor for the broader rivalry between nations and economic systems with the rise of imperialism and the pursuit of world power this game has gone through two major transformations since the days of russian british rivalry with the rise first of communism and then of islam as world forces opposing imperialism the main themes of postmodern imperialism geopolitics and the great games include us imperial strategy as an outgrowth of british imperialism and its transformation following the collapse of the soviet union the significance of the creation of israel with respect to the imperial project the repositioning of russia in world politics after the collapse of the soviet union the emerging role of china and iran in eurasia the emerging opposition to the us and nato as the critical literature on nato the new russia and the middle east is fragmented this work brings these elements together in historical perspective with an understanding from the arab muslim world s point of view as it is the main focus of all the great games it strives to bridge the gap between western russian and middle eastern readers with an analysis that is accessible and appeals to all critical thinkers and at the same time provides the tools to analyze the current game as it evolves the great games of yore britain vs russia and their empires in the 19th century and the us vs the soviet union in the 20th century no longer translate merely as the us vs russia or russia china a major new player is a collective one nato which today is as vital as the emperor s clothes to justify the global reach of us imperialism today the playing field the geopolitical context is broader than it was in either the 19th or 20th century games though eurasia continues to be center field where most of the world s population and energy resources lie the existence of israel is an anomaly which seriously complicates the shaping of the geopolitical game its roles in the great games as both colony and an imperial power in its own right is analyzed in the context of the history of judaism and its relations with both the western christian and the muslim worlds
