while library literature has made at least a passing effort to cover services to american indians most of the writings have been from a white perspective very little attention has been paid to how native americans have traditionally gathered and passed along knowledge primarily through visual and oral means this work examines how libraries traditionally provided service to native americans and how such service could be improved through an understanding of indian traditions chapters present an overview of library services before world war ii the various methods native americans have used to preserve their heritage and the importance of the preservation and maintenance of artifacts the current state of library services is then explored followed by a chapter on how new technologies are being used to expand and improve services a final chapter offers guidelines for collection management and reveals many of the images and stereotypes to be found in much of the literature for and about american indians

Indian education 1988

the story is based on a memory from my childhood as a seven year old i often stood on the fence surrounding our family home facing the street in pine ridge south dakota it ran north past our home and provided entertainment for a inquisitive seven year old one day in 1944 during world war ii i noticed an older american indian driving the then traditional team of horses and wagon he was slouched down as he passed me later as i continued to view the daily activity i saw him return this time a young soldier in uniform sat beside him proud and tall towering over his companion as i watched the two riding toward me i could see the older man slowly beginning to straighten up and before they were out of my view he was sitting as tall and proud as the young soldier i always thought of it as a father who came to town to meet the local bus to pick up his son who was home on leave for seventy years this memory was kept alive in my heart now i give it back to the great grandchildren of the men and women who served their country the stories of the service men and women are based on the history of those who served but all characters are fictitious not all battles of world war ii are covered in this book this is a telling of what the native americans who served shared with the students may god bless them and their descendants who keep their memories alive
