the idea for this book came while i was observing a student teacher and a master teacher i realized that most student teachers while in training do not have the opportunity to think creatively about their lessons i also noticed that teachers new to the field of teaching suffer the same fate they are too busy trying to survive the day and are not sure how to plan and organize their teaching lesson plans are one of the most important tools for a teacher and more important for the novice teacher i believe that during student teaching or during their undergraduate years if students were equipped with this book their first year teaching will not look so first year imagine an undergraduate class filled with soon to be social studies teachers discussing these selected lesson plans improving upon them and making them their own most first year teachers over teach or under teach and both types still miss the marks on the standardized test these lesson plans will give the new teacher a place to begin

there has been much discussion of narrative aspects of the bible in recent years but the ends of biblical narratives how the ends contribute to closure for their stories and how the ending strategies affect the whole narrative have not been studied comprehensively this study shows how the writers and editors of short narratives in genesis gave their stories a sense of closure or in a few cases the sense of non closure multiple and sometimes unexpected forms of closure are identified together these form a set of closural conventions this contribution to narrative poetics of the hebrew bible in the light of source criticism will also be valuable to those who are interested in narrative and in concepts of closure in this enlightening and insightful monograph john b hatch analyzes various public discourses that have attempted to address the racialized legacy of slavery from west africa to the united states and in doing so proposes a rhetorical theory of reconciliation recognizing the impact both of religious traditions and modern social values on the dialogue of reconciliation hatch examines these influences in tandem with contemporary critical race theory hatch explores the social psychological and ethical challenges of racial reconciliation in light of work by mark mcphail kenneth burke paul ricoeur and others he then develops his own framework for understanding reconciliation both as the recovery of a coherent ethical grammar and as a process of rhetorical interaction and hermeneutic reorientation through apology forgiveness reparations symbolic healing and related genres of reparative action what emerges from this work is a profound vision for the prospects of meaningful redress and reconciliation in american race relations
