images and sites from the street art scene her careful analyses show how these developed new architectural and spatial vocabularies that drew on the city's infrastructure and daily urban experience these works challenged mainstream urban development practices and engaged with citizen activism and with a wider civic discourse about what a city can be loeb extends this urban focus to her examination of the extensive outdoor installation of the berlin wall memorial and its mandate to represent the history of the city's division she studies its surrounding neighborhoods to show that while the memorial adopts many of the urban oriented vocabularies established by the earlier works of public art she examines it truncates the story of urban division which stretches beyond the wall's existence loeb suggests that by embracing more multi vocal perspectives the memorial could encourage the kind of participatory and heterogeneous construction of the city championed by the earlier works of public art
