in most mainstream traditions of hinduism and buddhism women have for centuries largely been excluded from positions of religious and ritual leadership however as this volume shows in an increasing number of late 20th century and early 21st century contexts women can and do undergo monastic and priestly education they can receive ordination initiation as buddhist nuns or hindu priestesses and they are accepted as religious and political leaders even though these processes still take place largely outside or at the margins of traditional religious institutions it is clear that women are actually establishing new religious trends and currents they are attracting followers and they are occupying religious positions on par with men at times women are filling a void left behind by male religious specialists who left the profession and at times they are perceived as their rivals in some cases this process takes place in collaboration with male religious specialists in others against the will of the women s male counterparts however in most cases we see both acceptance and resistance whether silently or with great fanfare women are grasping new opportunities to occupy positions of leadership this book offers ten in depth case studies analysing culturally historically and geographically unique situations in order to explore the historical background contemporary trajectories and impact of the emergence of new and powerful forms of female agency in mostly conservative hindu and buddhist religious traditions

Biodiversity of the Himalaya: Jammu and Kashmir State 2020-02-26

Pathogenic Diseases of a Wonder Plant-Seabuckthorn in Garhwal Himalayas and their Biocontrol 2022-02-15

the northern part of india harbours a great diversity of medicinal plants because of the majestic himalayan range so far about 8000 species of angiosperms 44 species of gymnosperms and 600 species of pteridophytes have been reported in the indian himalaya of those 1748 species are known as medicinal plants the world health organization who estimated that 80 of the population of developing countries relies on traditional medicines mostly plant drugs for their primary health care needs medicinal plants traditionally occupied an important position in rural and tribal lives of india and are considered as one of the most important sources of medicines since the dawn of human civilization seabuckthorn is a general term given to the deciduous shrub tree hippophae linn it is one of the most magical plant resources with higher value of economy and ecology not only this the plant is equally important for firewood fodder and serves as a variety of purposes including properties in the indian himalayan region in general and in dry habits in particular seabuckthorn plants collected and exploited unscientifically from uttarakhand due to its use as food medicines and cosmetics it is also known as wonder plant due to its multifarious benefits therefore seabuckthorn should serve as a measure to safeguard medicinal and nutritional plants to conserve biodiversity and environment and to generate sustainable income source for local people despite although there are a few reports available regarding the pathological aspect of hippophae spp in india but there is no systematic study on distribution and severity of diseases occurring on hippophae salicifolia d don in uttarakhand hence a systematic study was undertaken on the occurrence of diseases on seabuckthorn plant which are responsible for negatively affecting its yield and quality and to search for effective biocontrol agents from the rhizosphere of the host plant diseases and insects are the major factors affecting the success of seabuckthorn cultivation at present few pests and diseases on hippophae salicifolia have been reported control measures depend on proper identification of diseases and their causal agents proper disease diagnosis is therefore vital as without proper identification of the disease and the disease causing agent disease control measures are waste of time and money and can lead to further plant losses additionally the intensive use of fungicides for the control of diseases has resulted in the accumulation of toxic chemical which are hazardous to human beings and to the environment the increasing awareness of fungicide related hazards has emphasized the need for adopting a safer biological method and very little work has been done to search for microbial antagonists which could serve as biocontrol agents against diseases of hippophae salicifolia therefore considering the paucity of knowledge coupled with the manifold medicinal socio economic as well as ecological significance of seabuckthorn in himalayan regions the present investigation was framed a total of five diseases have been successfully identified alongwith the confirmation of causal fungal agents though there were several other fungal species isolated and identified from the seabuckthorn eco climate but only thirteen species were finally confirmed to cause above five diseases thus it becomes a part of maiden studies on this magical plant of himalayan region which is seeking more attention for further investigation treatment of valuable plant wealth is possible through the use of various pesticides insecticides and other chemicals but chemical treatments are not ecofriendly and therefore effective bio control mechanisms have some hope to treat such plants in a healthy vision therefore in this study efforts were also being made in this piece of research to find out some microbial antagonist among the isolated rhizospheric mycoflora that could act as bio control agents against isolated pathogens for this purpose trichoderma harzianum was screened out for its antagonist ability against different pathogens fortunately it proved to be a success acting as strong antagonist against the pathogens to conclude this preliminary study on the seabuckthorn pathogens and biocontrol agent is a small effort in the natural habitats of fragile himalayan ecosystems but nonetheless opens new horizons of research in this challenging area of biological sciences further isolation of some newly recorded fungi from seabuckthorn associated climate makes the study more interesting and opens the doors for new researchers in such a diverse habitats dr nivedita sharma sacred kingship has been the core political form in small scale societies and in vast empires for much of world history this collaborative and interdisciplinary book recasts the relationship between religion and politics by exploring this institution in long term and global comparative perspective editors a azfar moin and alan strathern present a theoretical framework for understanding sacred kingship which leading scholars reflect on and respond to in a series of essays they distinguish between two separate but complementary religious tendencies immanentism and transcendentalism which mold kings into divinized or righteous rulers respectively whereas immanence demands priestly and cosmic rites from kings to sustain the flourishing of life transcendence turns the focus to salvation and subordinates rulers to higher ethical objectives secular modernity does not end the struggle between immanence and transcendence flourishing and righteousness but only displaces it from kings onto nations and individuals after an essay by marshall sahlins that ranges from the pacific to the arctic the
