Interpreting the Axe Trade 2005-02-17

interpreting the axe trade documents the changing character and context of stone axe production and exchange in the british neolithic drawing on a variety of studies the authors explore some of the problems and potentials that attend archaeological discussions of exchange at both a theoretical and a methodological level out of this critique arises an argument for an integrated approach to the production circulation and consumption of past material an approach which acknowledges the subtle and complex roles that things may play in the reproduction of social life these arguments provide the basis for a case study which explores the links between the social contexts within which neolithic stone axes circulated in britain and the social and material conditions under which those objects were originally produced field survey excavation and detailed technological studies at the largest stone axe source in britain are set alongside analyses of the changing character and social context of axe circulation and deposition across the country as a whole these different analytical threads are then woven together in the final section of the book where the authors suggest that the patterns explored in the course of their work reflect major changes in the nature of social life during the neolithic syntactic dependencies are often non local they can involve two positions in a syntactic structure whose correspondence cannot be captured by invoking concepts like minimal clause or predicate argument structure relevant phenomena include long distance movement long distance reflexivization long distance agreement control non local deletion long distance case assignment consecutio temporum extended scope of negation and semantic binding of pronouns a recurring strategy pursued in many contemporary syntactic theories is to model cases of non local dependencies in a strictly local way by successively passing on the relevant information in small domains of syntactic structures the present volume brings together eighteen articles that investigate non local dependencies in movement agreement binding scope and deletion constructions from different theoretical backgrounds among them versions of the minimalist program hpsg and categorial grammar and based on evidence from a variety of typologically distinct languages this way advantages and disadvantages of local treatments of non local dependencies become evident furthermore it turns out that local analyses of non local phenomena developed in different syntactic theories spanning the derivational declarative divide often may not only share identical research questions but also rely on identical research strategies
