the american leadership power system is fractured we ve lost touch with how power relationships are supposed to work as a result our institutions our nation and almost every form of democratic republic may be worse off now than they have been in decades in the united states alone we have seen failures at the federal state and local levels we have also observed failure at the social level by civilized members of society who would still attempt to deny power and privilege based on gender race or sex power in america is in paradox this book is about transforming human relationships that are built around power to start overcoming these paradoxes we must understand where and how they originate we ll talk about power relationships at every level from government to governed owners to employees and leaders to followers to name a few more importantly we will suggest solutions and attempt to demonstrate how success can emerge from failure when the right concepts and models are better understood perspective combined with the willingness to observe analyze and critique our domains of power are necessary to recognize their respective paradoxes this process is vital to getting back on track as a country and to making power work better for everyone in our post pandemic world our belief is that a fresh examination holds the promise to make the united states of america united once again the rest of the world will benefit as well
