it s 1971 and joan dumann fears her former business partner wants her dead but her anxiety is less about dying than it is about feeling disrespected and invalidated as she constructs a letter about her predicament she revisits her past born into a prominent philadelphia quaker family in 1915 and raised with privilege and opportunity joan wrestles with her turbulent thoughts and unfulfilled desires an internal battle that often results in self destructive tendencies when she attempts to push against the norms for women of her time in order to forge her own identity she is met with resistance yet she might also be her own worst enemy often alienating those who care deeply for her both manipulative and vulnerable naive and conniving joan is like many people complex and misunderstood inspired by a letter written by the real joan found hidden in the wall of a pennsylvania home more than half a century later this story is a fictionalized imagining of who she was and what motivated her moving through several decades and events from the 1918 influenza pandemic to prohibition to the great depression to vietnam a letter in the wall examines the internal and external factors that influence one woman s journey toward independence and empowerment a letter to my daughter copyright 2007 2009 by kim s all rights reserved where my first book a letter to my son took me ten years to complete from initial conception to publication this second book was written in only two months time it seemed to flow out of my mind faster than my hands could type a wonderful dilemma for a writer when i wrote a letter to my daughter i was in a positive frame of mind and i wanted to find the best way i could to express that i also wanted to show how my mindset had evolved over the past three years to really contrast this book with my first so where the first book dwells on dark topics like adversity and victimization the second is focused on hope and personal accountability where the first book cover is a pale yellow and gray colour the second is covered with all kinds of colours my author picture on the first book is done in black and white i appear sombre in it and i m standing alone with my back against a wall my author picture on the second book is done in full colour i appear cheerful in it and i m surrounded by people i love of course the puzzle also symbolizes our interconnection regardless of our individual beliefs that was the purpose of this cover and book as a whole it is me expressing a very joyful time in my life and sharing it with those i love it is intended as an empowering message about being true to yourself while respecting other people s choices it s about honouring all the different beliefs in our world and celebrating their similarities rather than belabouring their differences ailing seventeenth and eighteenth century french men and women members of their families or their local physician or surgeon could write to high profile physicians and surgeons seeking expert medical advice this study the first full length examination of the practice of consulting by letter provides a cohesive portrayal of some of the widespread ailments of french society in the latter part of the early modern period it explores how and why changes occurred in the relationships between those who sought and those who provided medical advice previous studies of epistolary medical consulting have limited attention to the output of one or two practitioners but this study uses the consultations of around 100 individual practitioners from the mid seventeenth century to the time of the revolution to give a broad picture of patients and physicians perceptions of illnesses and how they should be treated on a day to day basis it makes a unique contribution to the history of medicine as no other study has been undertaken in the consulting by letter of surgeons as opposed to physicians it is shown that the well known disputation between physicians and surgeons tells only a part of the history whereas in fact necessity required that these two professions had to work together for the patients good
