drawing on the tools of game design to fix democracy anyone who has ever been to a public hearing or community meeting would agree that participatory democracy can be boring hours of repetitive presentations alternately alarmist or complacent for or against accompanied by constant heckling often with no clear outcome or decision is this the best democracy can offer in making democracy fun josh lerner offers a novel solution for the sad state of our deliberative democracy the power of good game design what if public meetings featured competition and collaboration such as team challenges clear rules presented and modeled in multiple ways measurable progress such as scores and levels and engaging sounds and visuals these game mechanics would make meetings more effective and more enjoyable even fun lerner reports that institutions as diverse as the united nations the u s army and grassroots community groups are already using games and game like processes to encourage participation drawing on more than a decade of practical experience and extensive research he explains how games have been integrated into a variety of public programs in north and south america he offers rich stories of game techniques in action in children s councils social service programs and participatory budgeting and planning with these real world examples in mind lerner describes five kinds of games and twenty six game mechanics that are especially relevant for democracy he finds that when governments and organizations use games and design their programs to be more like games public participation becomes more attractive effective and transparent game design can make democracy fun and make it work across countries and time asylum seekers and refugees have been represented in a variety of ways in some representations they appear negatively as dangers threatening to over run a country or a region with floods of incompatible strangers in others the same people are portrayed positively with compassion and pictured as desperately in need of assistance how these competing perceptions are received has significant consequences for determining public policy human rights international agreements and the realization of cultural diversity and so it is imperative to understand how these images are perpetuated to this end this volume reflects on museum practice and the contexts stories and images of asylum seekers and refugees prevalent in our mass media based on case studies from australia new zealand and the united kingdom the overall findings are illustrative of narratives and images common to museums and the media throughout the world they aim to challenge political rhetoric and populist media imagery and consider what forms of dissent are likely to be sustained and what narratives ultimately break through and can lead to empathy and positive political change
