issues in families and related systems utilizing numerous case illustrations and interview excerpts. Dr. Imber Black first delineates the problems common to family/larger system situations, analyzing the origins of these interactions, the assessment model, and interviewing methods used. In the second half of her book, she presents in-depth discussions of strategies for improving the relationship between families and related systems through concrete examples and hands-on analysis. Imber Black shows how the misconceptions, assumptions, and subsequent labeling of family functioning and family members give rise to stalemated situations. Families and larger systems provides a practical guide for all clinicians, regardless of theoretical orientation. Therapists who wish to maintain a career in public sector settings such as mental health clinics, hospitals, and schools will find in this volume direction for effective work with families and the maintenance of good working relationships with colleagues. Therapists in private practice will discover that Imber Black's model will aid their conceptualization of cases that have involved multiple therapists or other practitioners. Much of the material presented will also be useful to human services workers, both professional and paraprofessional, in welfare, child welfare, probation, drug counseling, schools, and other institutions. The book's ecological viewpoint, which enables such professionals to see their own position in the system, also helps them to avoid the traps of replicating existing patterns and to position themselves for therapeutic change. Finally, this book will be of interest to human service system administrators and program planners. The case examples offer a seldom-seen view of the struggles families and multiple helpers can have with one another, while its theoretical models can be utilized to assess current inter-systematic functioning among larger systems in a community with implications for program design and burn-out prevention.
