a definitive global survey of the interaction of ethnicity nationalism and politics this handbook blends rigorous theoretically grounded analysis with empirically rich illustrations to provide a state of the art overview of the contemporary debates on one of the most pervasive international security challenges today fully updated for the second edition the book includes a new section which offers detailed analyses of contemporary cases of conflict such as in ukraine kosovo the african great lakes region and in the kurdish areas across the middle east thus providing accessible examples that bridge the gap between theory and practice the contributors offer a 360 degree perspective on ethnic conflict from the theoretical foundations of nationalism and ethnicity to the causes and consequences of ethnic conflict and to the various strategies adopted in response to it without privileging any specific explanation of why ethnic conflict happens at a particular place and time or why attempts at preventing or settling it might fail or succeed the routledge handbook of ethnic conflict enables readers to gain a better insight into such defining moments in post cold war international history as the disintegration of the soviet union and yugoslavia and their respective consequences the genocide in rwanda and the relative success of conflict settlement efforts in northern ireland by contributing to understanding the varied and multiple causes of ethnic conflicts and to learning from the successes and failures of their prevention and settlement the handbook makes a powerful case that ethnic conflicts are neither unavoidable nor unresolvable but rather that they require careful analysis and thoughtful and measured responses

Ethnic Conflict

ethnic conflict is an elemental force in international politics and a major threat to regional security and stability ethnicity as a source of conflict has deep historic roots many such conflicts lay dormant suppressed by the soviet empire or overshadowed by the ideological competition of the cold war both protagonists in the cold war demonstrated unwarranted optimism about their ability to defuse ethnicity and ethnic conflict marxists believed that ethnicity would give way to proletarian internationalism social class and economic welfare would determine both self identity and loyalty to political institutions that would transcend ethnic identification or religious affiliation western democracies assumed that nation building and economic development were not only vital components in the strategy to contain communist expansion but that capitalism economic prosperity and liberal democratic values would also create free societies with a level of political development measured by loyalty to the state rather than to the narrower ethnic group instead the goals of assimilation and integration within the larger context of economic and political development are being replaced by violent ethnic corrections to artificially imposed state boundaries the balkan and transcaucasian conflicts for example are ancient in origin and have as their object the territorial displacement of entire ethnic groups such conflicts by their nature defy efforts at mediation from outside since they are fed by passions that do not yield to rational political compromise they are as john keegan describes in his most recent study of war apolitical to a degree for which western strategists have made little allowance 1 the demise of european communism and the russian empire has unleashed this century s third wave of ethnic nationalism and conflict the first came in the wake of the collapsing ottoman russian and austro hungarian empires which came to a climax after world war i the second followed the end of european colonialism after world war ii

Ethnic Conflict in International Relations

the outbreak of numerous and simultaneous violent conflicts around the globe in the past decade resulted in immense human suffering and countless lost lives in part both results were aided by inactivity or by belated and often misplaced responses by the international community to the embattled groups the apparent inability of the international community to respond firmly and purposefully to violent conflicts can be attributed partially to a general confusion and misunderstanding of the root causes of such conflicts in some cases the international community argued that violent conflicts could be attributed to irreconcilable ethnic differences which like earthquakes are impossible to prevent or control at other times the argument was that such conflicts were the results of evil leaders capable of engineering mass violent acts ethnic conflict presents an interdisciplinary and comparative effort to explain the root causes of ethnic conflicts in terms of political economic and social common denominators that characterize all such conflicts it seeks to dispel misplaced assumptions about violent domestic conflicts and by providing a clearer picture of the mechanics of such conflicts it hopes to assist in the process of conflict resolution and prevention
