this book explores both scientific and humanistic theoretical traditions in anthropology through the lens of ontology the first part of the book examines different methods for generating valid anthropological knowledge and proposes a shift in current consensus drawing on western scholars of antiquity and the medieval period and moving away from 20th century theorists it argues that we must first make ontological assumptions about the kinds of things that can exist or not before we can then develop epistemologies that study those kinds of things the book goes on to apply the ontology first theory to a set of case studies in modern day conspiracy theories misinformation and magical thinking it asserts that we need to move away from unneeded metaphysical assumptions of conspiracy theories being misinformation and argues that reconstructing particular historical events can be a fruitful zone for application of quantitative methods to humanistic questions theorizing the anthropology of belief is an excellent supplementary suitable for upper level undergraduate and graduate courses in anthropological theory this unusual book examines definitions of the fable apologue parable moral tale etc it then proposes the use of the term exemplum used by medieval scribes to define all types of wisdom narratives it makes a cross cultural structural analysis of the exemplum and identifies its tripartite structure composed of the promythium the nucleus and the epimythium the book ends with an analysis of the reasons why grown men spent so much time writing and collecting these tales it demonstrates that fables and related genres were not really meant for little children to learn moral lessons they were used to teach complex religious and political ideologies to safely ridicule tyrants and despots to release tensions and to give good or bad advice
