after eleven years of teaching international economics in a variety of colleges at the university of nebraska business administration arts and sciences and architecture hank van den berg was ready to begin his own text he was particularly interested in writing a book that would engage students more than the existing ones do and appeal to the diverse audience he has taught adult students students from a variety of countries students with a variety of academic interests the book is arranged to make reading easy and enjoyable with a list of important things each chapter seeks to teach a summary at the end of the chapter references for further reading on each of the topics covered and end of chapter problems and questions the book takes an international view of issues looking at them from the perspective of different countries this gives students a much clearer and more balanced picture the topic of how globalization affects technological progress and economic growth is given much greater prominence than in any other international economics textbook case studies are used throughout to show key concepts and issues allowing students to see practical those usually omitted from other textbooks these are the intentions behind the present book which is an outcrop from undergraduate and graduate courses in international economics that the author has been holding at the university of rome since 1974 and from his on going research work in this field accordingly the work is organized as two books in one by distributing the material between text and appendices the treatment in the body of this book is directed to undergraduate students and is mainly confined to graphic analysis and to some elementary algebra but it is assumed that the reader will have a good knowledge of basic microeconomics and macroeconomics so that the usual review material on production functions indifference curves standard keynesian model etc etc has been omitted each chapter is followed by an appendix in which the treatment is mainly mathematical and where i the topics explained in the text are treated at a level suitable for advanced undergraduate or first year graduate students and ii generalizations and or topics not treated in the text including some of those at the frontiers of research are formally examined
