Claude Raguet Hirst 2004 an exhibition held at the national gallery of art washington from july 4 to september 4 and at the museum of modern art new york from october 3 to november 18 1944

The New Painting, Impressionism, 1874-1886 1986 this volume covers 18th century irish artists plus those born in the 18th century but who lived into 19th century and painted in the grand manner those early 19th century artists who painted in a more victorian idiom will be in volume 2

Descriptive and Historical Catalogue of the Pictures in the National Gallery 1883 many color illustrations with explanations from the collection of the national gallery of art highlighting art from the thirteenth through the twentieth centuries from italian spanish flemish dutch french british and american schools

The Art of the National Gallery 1904 it is usual when thinking of the painting of the renaissance to concentrate on the great italian masterpieces but to think exclusively along those lines would be to exclude the very great and to modern eyes very appealing painting that was happening at the same time north of the alps van der weyden memling bosch dürer altdorfer lucas cranach and holbein are all here reflecting the national gallery s very high quality holdings of the paintings of those schools and because the volume covers the whole of the german holdings there are modern works like klimt s sumptuous portrait of hermine gallia too page 7 8

The Colonial Image 1987 george de forest brush 1854 1941 created an important series of paintings of american indians that was much celebrated in his time but has been seen rarely since brush combined extraordinary technical skills acquired during several years of training in the studio of jean léon gérôme with first hand experience of living among the arapahoe shoshone and crow indians in wyoming and montana completed during the 1880s many of these works were quickly acquired by major american collectors and have remained in private hands through several generations this beautiful book the first scholarly study of brush s indian paintings features detailed discussions of individual paintings interpretative essays exploring the historical and cultural context in which the paintings were produced a comprehensive chronology and lavish colour reproductions of numerous paintings not shown publicly since the nineteenth century after more than six years of study in paris during the 1870s brush travelled to wyoming to join his brother in a ranching venture fascinated by the native people he met he quickly undertook life studies of indians living on the wind river and crow reservations later when he returned east he produced a number of studio paintings in which the indian served as metaphor new research reveals that these stunningly beautiful paintings of american indians are also surprisingly complex meditations on the advent of modernism

The National Gallery Collection 1987 this volume is devoted to the american naive paintings in the national gallery of art which has one of the most important collections of this kind in the world created outside the academic mainstream these paintings show an extraordinary diversity of individual expression and serve as vivid documents of american culture most of the works formerly belonged to the collection of colonel edgar william and bernice chrysler garbisch who donated more than 300 paintings and about 100 drawings to the gallery over nearly thirty years most date from the nineteenth century and a substantial number are by well known folk artists including erastus salisbury field ammi phillips and william matthew prior the breadth and depth of the collection is such that it is possible in several cases to trace the progress of an individual artist s style although the majority of works came to the gallery without identification through painstaking research it has been possible to make attributions which are published here for the first time many of the works in the gallery s collection of american naive paintings are reproduced here in color the extensive catalogue provides a full history of the objects and artists with technical notes as well as biographical and bibliographical information
