this book is about the rise of a new ethos in british mountaineering during the late nineteenth century it traces how british attitudes to mountains were transformed by developments both within the new sport of mountaineering and in the wider fin de siècle culture the emergence of the new genre of mountaineering literature which helped to create a self conscious community of climbers with broadly shared values coincided with a range of cultural and scientific trends that also influenced the direction of mountaineering the author discusses the growing preoccupation with the physical basis of aesthetic sensations and with physicality and materiality in general the new interest in the physiology of effort and fatigue and the characteristically victorian drive to enumerate codify and classify examining a wide range of texts from memoirs and climbing club journals to hotel visitors books he argues that the figure known as the new mountaineer was seen to embody a distinctly modern approach to mountain climbing and mountain aesthetics upon that mountain is the first autobiography of the mountaineer and explorer eric shipton in it he describes all his pre war climbing including his everest bids of the 1930s and his second karakoram survey in 1939 when he returned to snow lake to complete the mapping of the ranges flanking the hispar and choktoi glacier systems around the ogre crossing great swathes of the himalaya the book like so many of shipton s works is both entertaining and an important addition to the mountain literature genre it captures an important period in mountaineering history that just before the second world war an ends on an elegiac note as shipton describes his last evening at the starkly beautiful snow lake before he returns to a civilisation about to embark on a cataclysmic war emerging from the white hugeness will let more than one reader speechless it is hard to figure out that we are still on earth in this volume you can find all the information about the antarctic peninsula this book is an absolute must have for all climbers and travellers about the author damien gidea is a polar mountaineer and explorer he successfully led seven expeditions in the highest antarctica mountains from 2001 to 2008 he is the author of the book entitled antarctic mountaineering chronology published in 1998 and of detailed topographical maps of the livingston island 2004 and vinson mountain 2006 his articles and photographs were published in many periodicals around the world as the american alpine journal or the american magazine called alpinist he also led a skiing expedition to the south pole and took part in several expeditions in the himalayas in karakorum and in the andes when he is not exploring damien gidea lives in australia excerpt this is the most popular and accessible part of antarctica and arguably the most beautiful to many people the antarctic peninsula with its icebergs penguins seals whales snowy peaks and glaciers dropping into the sea is antarctica no longer unexplored the peninsula now draws tourists and other adventurers due to its great natural beauty a melding of mountains and sea of rock and ice of twilight colour and warmth far from the vast monochrome inland the early years of exploration in the peninsula region mainly consisted of commercial trips by sealers and whalers with geographical discovery a secondary aim the first party to visit the antarctic for purely geographical exploration was adrien de gerlache s 1897 99 belgica expedition their ship became trapped in pack ice and they were thus the first people to spend a winter in antarctica the expedition not only included a young roald amundsen who would later return south for the pole and greater glory but also frederick cook who was the ship s doctor cook part of a long and continuing tradition of dishonest polar adventurers would gain notoriety for making fraudulent claims to have reached both the north pole first and to have made the first ascent of alaska s mount mckinley cook would also later spend time in a us prison where amundsen was a famous visitor programs has been incredible and continues to be so providing us with critical insights into not only antarctica but also our world as a whole however in purely mountaineering terms the activity of such operations was understandably limited mountaineering merely enabled scientific work with recreational climbing discouraged and usually unrecorded in the following pages i hope to preserve at least some of those ascents as often they have proven to be more significant to those involved than the official scientific record may indicate and they are part of the rich human history of antarctica that should be recorded for all to enjoy to the impartial observer britain does not appear to have any mountains yet the british invented the sport of mountain climbing and for two periods in history british climbers led the world in the pursuit of this beautiful and dangerous obsession unjustifiable risk is the story of the social economic and cultural conditions that gave rise to the sport and the achievements and motives of the scientists and poets parsons and anarchists villains and judges ascetics and drunks that have shaped its development over the past two hundred years the history of climbing inevitably reflects the wider changes that have occurred in british society including class gender nationalism and war but the sport has also contributed to changing social attitudes to nature and beauty heroism and death over the years increasing wealth leisure and mobility have gradually transformed climbing from an activity undertaken by an eccentric and privileged minority into a sub division of the leisure and tourist industry while competition improved technology and information and increasing specialisation have helped to create climbs of unimaginable difficulty at the leading edge of the sport but while much has changed even more has remained the same today s climbers would be instantly recognisable to their victorian predecessors with their desire to escape from the crowded complexity of urban society and willingness to take unjustifiable risk in pursuit of beauty adventure and self fulfilment unjustifiable risk was shortlisted for the boardman tasker prize in 2011
