these influential lectures are still an important resource for the study of early christian heresies it is the faith of christendom that jesus christ was a supernatural perfect and divine man to the assaults of infidelity we oppose the evident fact that no power existed in the ancient church capable of elaborating such moral qualities miracles of such an order or a humanity so sacred as adorn the gospel story but this is not the whole of our case perhaps it has not been sufficiently considered that even if early christian impulses had rightly combined all admirable qualities and had discovered the principles on which a perfect being should wield the powers of deity the task would not have been accomplished when we speak of a supernatural man a perfect man and a divine man we speak of a man great moral qualities and a correct employment of divine power are one thing a man is another thing and the doctrine of the incarnation is not made good by showing the jesus christ had great moral qualities nor by proving that he employed divine powers correctly the doctrine of firms that he was man preface excerpt from the efficacy of prayer being the donnellan lectures for the year 1877 there is i suppose no question in theology the decision of which more deeply affects man s practical life than this has prayer any effect beyond the mind of the person who prays if this question be answered in the negative if we arrive at the conclusion that prayer has no external efficacy it is plain that its internal efficacy must speedily disappear no man s mind can be beneficially affected by the constant repetition of that which he believes to be a mere idle form indeed with such a belief he would soon discontinue the practice and it is far better that he should my object in the following lectures is to examine the evidence on both sides of this important question about the publisher forgotten books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books find more at forgottenbooks enjoyed but an infinite enterprise 1 t f p 95 ff ibid p 128 the enterprise takes shape as the task of self creation this is bergson s most complete and perhaps finest expression of his intuition of freedom free acts are those that create personality the creation of free personality would seem to be the proximate purpose of the evolution of life on this planet 1 chapter iii mind and body matiere et mmoire is the title of bergson s second important work the purpose of the book is to define the role of the body in the life of the mind 1 the book was published in 1896 about six years after les donnies immediates the author tells us that during that six years interval he set himself to find out what physiology and pathology teach for fact as to the relation between the physical and the moral 2 the problem of mind and body took shape for him as the problem of perception 8 he saw that mind is most accessible in the form of memory and that memory becomes embodied in and through the senses he made a minute study of the literature of aphasia aphasia furnishes most instructive types of abnormalities of memory and it seems to be essentially a dislocation of word memory and in the memory of words their sight and sound we find so bergson thinks the vast problem of mind and body focussed to a point the problem of perception seems at first glance remote from that of mind and body so much so that perhaps i owe you an apology for announcing 1 m m p 198 le roy une philosophic nouvelle p 9 m m avant propos p vi 62 one subject and apparently lecturing on another we all want to know how mind stands with respect to body for that problem bears excerpt from the stoic moralists and the christians in the first two centuries being the donnellan lectures for the year 1879 80 preached in the chapel of trinity college dublin in sending forth a second edition of this little book i desire to mention that i have learned with much satisfaction that many of the national school teachers of the country have received it very kindly their appreciation of my notice of some of the great labourers in the schools of morals and philosophy showed a sympathy with these subjects in a position very different indeed from that of the ancients but still connected with youth and the formation of character such a spirit in the teacher of an elementary school would probably i would conceive diffuse itself among his scholars and its spread i cannot but think would be of far greater value to the youth in their after life than many of the subjects of his school course on which he laboured very diligently and properly to earn result fees seeing the admitted failure of the ancient moralists we are on the way i trust to value the vantage ground from which in more favoured times the principles of life and conduct may be taught about the publisher forgotten books publishes donnellan lectures in these lectures i have endeavoured to examine some points in which the results of modern research and the development of modern thought are supposed to have seriously affected the proofs of natural theology it has of late come to be regarded as almost a settled matter that the arguments on which theists have hitherto relied have in this way been so undermined that they have become antiquated and useless so that it has become customary even among theologians to speak of the so called proofs of theism about the publisher forgotten books publishes hundreds of thousands of
