in the popular imagination the twenty years after world war ii are associated with simpler happier more family focused living we think of stereotypical baby boom families like the cleavers white suburban and well on their way to middle class affluence for these couples and their children a happy stable family life provided an antidote to the anxieties and uncertainties of the emerging nuclear age but not everyone looked or lived like the cleavers for those who could not have children or have as many children as they wanted the postwar baby boom proved a source of social stigma and personal pain further in 1950 roughly one in three americans made below middle class incomes and over fifteen million lived under jim crow segregation for these individuals home life was not an oasis but a challenge intimately connected to the era s many political and social upheavals everybody else provides a comparative analysis of diverse postwar families and examines the lives and case records of men and women who applied to adopt or provide pre adoptive foster care in the 1940s and 1950s it considers an array of individuals both black and white middle and working class who found themselves on the margins of a social world that privileged family membership these couples wanted adoptive and foster children in order to achieve a sense of personal mission and meaning as well as a deeper feeling of belonging to their communities but their quest for parenthood also highlighted the many inequities of that era these individuals experiences seeking children reveal that the baby boom family was about much more than togetherness or a quiet house in the suburbs it also shaped people s ideas about the promises and perils of getting ahead in postwar america the condition of stuck is a condition well known by pastoral caregivers and leaders in when all else fails wayne menking argues that the way out of stuckness is not through the acquisition of faddish techniques but through a deep rethinking of our pastoral vocation and what our pastoral work is to be about pastoral care and leadership are not indistinguishable just as priestly work can never be separated from prophetic work they are always one and the same pastoral care and leadership then are not about helping people relieve their anxiety through the offering of palliative comfort but rather helping people to engage the powers that have hold of their life so as to leave what is old for what is new in this engagement the caregiver will always encounter powers against which niceness and unconditional love will not work using biblical images and narratives that depict god as a deeply empathic and compassionate god yet one who is never adaptively sympathetic menking asserts that pastoral caregivers and leaders must shed their niceness and adaptivity so as to employ their god given power if they are to help people
