The Philosophical Parent 2017-06-01 becoming parents draws us into philosophical quandaries before our children have even been born why do most of us want to have children should we make new people despite life's travails and our crowded world is adoptive parenthood just the same as biological parenthood once children arrive the questions start to be a mix of the profound and the practical should we share our lifestyle with our children no matter how unusual should we vaccinate and may we circumcise should we encourage gender differences tracing the arc of parenthood from the earliest days to the college years and beyond jean kazez explores 18 questions for philosophical parents applying the tools of philosophy and drawing on personal experience The Philosophical Parent offers a novel account of the parent child relationship and uses it to tackle a variety of parenting puzzles but more than that kazez celebrates both having children and philosophical reflection her book provides a challenging but cheerful companion for thoughtful parents and parents to be

Family Values 2016-08-02 the family is hotly contested ideological terrain some defend the traditional two parent heterosexual family while others welcome its demise opinions vary about how much control parents should have over their children's upbringing family values provides a major new theoretical account of the morality and politics of the family telling us why the family is valuable who has the right to parent and what rights parents should and should not have over their children harry brighthouse and adam swift argue that parent child relationships produce the familial relationship goods that people need to flourish children's healthy development depends on intimate relationships with authoritative adults while the distinctive joys and challenges of parenting are part of a fulfilling life for adults yet the relationships that make these goods possible have little to do with biology and do not require the extensive rights that parents currently enjoy challenging some of our most commonly held beliefs about the family brighthouse and swift explain why a child's interest in autonomy severely limits parents' right to shape their children's values and why parents have no fundamental right to confer wealth or advantage on their children family values reaffirms the vital importance of the family as a social institution while challenging its role in the reproduction of social inequality and carefully balancing the interests of parents and children

Philosophical Presentations of Raising Children 2019-03-19 this book uses contemporary film to articulate a philosophical account of raising children it forms part of a reevaluation of the parent as a pedagogical figure which stands in contrast to the instrumental accounts dominant in contemporary parenting culture hodgson and ramaekers use film in order to offer an affirmative account of the experience of raising children as a presentation of those inevitable aspects and experiences that upbringing is the initiation into language and the world the representative nature of the parent and the maintaining of mundane practices that constitute our shared culture and community the films which are discussed are taken as grammatical investigations and enable the authors to develop an account of the use of film in education and as educational philosophy and to respond to each film's invitation to articulate the existential dimensions of raising children philosophical presentations of raising children will be of interest to students and scholars across a range of disciplines including education sociology philosophy critical parenting studies and film studies

Parenting on Earth 2023-04-18 being parents and being human building hope for our children in a fragile world environmental catastrophes pandemics antibiotic resistance institutionalized injustice and war in a world so out of balance what does it take or even mean to be a good parent this book is one woman's search for an answer as a moral philosopher activist and mother drawing on the insights of philosophy and the experience of parent activists elizabeth cripps calls for parents to think radically about exactly what we owe our children and everyone else she shows how our children's needs are inseparable from the fate of the earth and the fortunes of others and how much is at stake in parenting today and she asks the hardest question should we have kids at all timely and thoughtful parenting on earth extends a challenge to anyone raising children in a troubled world and with it a vision of hope for our children's future cripps envisions a world where kids can prosper and grow a just world with thriving social systems and ecosystems where future generations can flourish and all children can lead a decent life she explains with bracing clarity why those raising kids today should be a force for change and bring up their children to do the same hard as this can be in the face of political gridlock ecoanxiety and general daily grind the tools of philosophy and psychology can help us find a way

The Claims of Parenting 2011-09-15 many sociological historical and cultural stories can be and have already been told about why it is that parents in post industrial western societies face an often overwhelming array of advice on how to bring up their children at the same time there have been several philosophical treatments of the legal moral and political issues surrounding issues of procreation the rights of children and the duties of parents as well as some philosophical accounts of the shifts in our underlying conceptualization of childhood and adult child relationships while this book partly builds on the insights of this literature it is significantly different in that it offers a philosophically informed discussion of the actual practical experience of being a parent with its deliberations judgements and dilemmas in probing the ethical and conceptual questions suggested by the parent child relationship this unique volume demonstrates the irreducible philosophical richness of this relationship and thus provides an important counter balance to the overly empirical and largely psychological focus of a great deal of parenting literature unlike other analytic work on the parent child relationship and the educational role of parents this work draws on first person accounts of the day to day experience of being a parent in order to explore the ethical and epistemological aspects of this experience in so doing it exposes the limitations of some of the languages within which contemporary parenting is conceptualized and discussed and opens up a space for thinking about childrearing and the parent child relationship beyond and other than in terms of the languages which dominate the ways in which we generally think about it today
