this book guides healthcare professionals hospital administrators and medical interpreters in the united states and internationally in ways to better communicate with deaf and hard of hearing d hh patients and sign language interpreters in healthcare settings it also provides an overview of the healthcare communication issues with healthcare professionals and d hh patients and the advantages and disadvantages of using in person interpreters vs video remote interpreting vri due to technology development hospital administrators have popularized the use of vri and reduced the number of in person interpreting services which have negatively affected the quality of medical interpreting services and patient provider communication the covid 19 pandemic also has accelerated the move toward more vri particularly in the us the book addresses an understudied aspect of access and is written by an international deaf researcher from japan who uses american sign language asl and english as non native languages in order to identify appropriate interpreting services for specific treatments the author focuses on healthcare professionals and d hh patients interpreting preferences for critical and non critical care in the us and offers a new theoretical framework an ecology of health communication to contextualize and analyze these preferences the ecological matrix and its five analytical dimensions i e physical material psychological social spatial and temporal allow readers to understand how these dimensions influence healthcare professionals and d hh patients interpreting preferences as well as the treatment outcomes this book concludes by prioritizing the use of an appropriate interpreter for specific treatments and allocating funds for in person interpreters for critical care treatments deaf rhetoric an ecology of health communication is primarily designed for healthcare professional students and professionals hospital administrators medical interpreters vri companies and healthcare researchers scholars interested in the communication preferences of healthcare professionals and deaf people also will find this text useful the book counters some of the power differences between healthcare providers and those who use medical services and subtly reminds others that deaf people are not solely the receivers of medical care but actually are full people the field of health care is growing and medical schools are increasingly called on to address cultural competencies this resource provides a needed intervention more the 1 46 million people in the united states have hearing losses in sufficient severity to be considered deaf another 21 million people have other hearing impairments for many deaf and hard of hearing individuals sign language and voice interpreting is essential to their participation in educational programs and their access to public and private services however there is less than half the number of interpreters needed to meet the demand interpreting quality is often variable and there is a considerable lack of knowledge of factors that contribute to successful interpreting perhaps it is not surprising then that a study by the national association of the deaf nad found that 70 of the deaf individuals are dissatisfied with interpreting quality because recent legislation in the united states and elsewhere has mandated access to educational employment and other contexts for deaf individuals and others with hearing disabilities there is an increasing need for quality sign language interpreting it is in education however that the need is most pressing particularly because more than 75 of deaf students now attend regular schools rather than schools for the deaf where teachers and classmates are unable to sign for themselves in the more than 100 interpreter training programs in the u s alone there are a variety of educational models but little empirical information on how to evaluate them or determine their appropriateness in different interpreting and interpreter education covering what we know what we do not know and what we should know several volumes have covered interpreting and interpreter education there are even some published dissertations that have included a single research study and a few books have attempted to offer methods for professional interpreters or interpreter educators with nods to existing research this is the first volume that synthesizes existing work and provides a coherent picture of the field as a whole including evaluation of the extent to which current practices are supported by validating research it will be the first comprehensive source suitable as both a reference book and a textbook for interpreter training programs and a variety of courses on bilingual education psycholinguistics and translation and cross linguistic studies
