essay from the year 2018 in the subject business economics investment and finance grade 10 language english abstract even though the reasoning to invest money into venture capital vc funds may vary according to the type of the investor according to Bygrave et al 1999 the main reasons include first investors expect high returns on capital invested into vc funds while a return of 30 p a was common most investors nowadays are seeking for consistent 15 25 p a which is in line with comparing portfolio companies to quoted companies and adding a risk premium second since vc target companies have a low correlation with quoted stocks investors might aim for diversification effects for their overall portfolio third as vc investments are highly illiquid they provide a return premium moreover the long term horizon these investments especially fits investors such as pension funds which have long term liabilities fourth beyond financial reasoning investors might also consider vc due to relatively cheap access to the research and development of young companies leading towards new ideas and products however since focus is shifting towards later stage financing this becomes less prevailing lastly since young companies typically realise fast growth they tend to create significant employment possibilities and thus represent a further investment objective of especially government related bodies a further reason includes that many start ups remain in the private market for many years due to the large supply of private capital as well as the scrutiny of public markets this phenomenon results in start ups realising their high growth phase while still being private as a result investors increasingly turn to the private vc market in order to benefit from these high growth phases besides investors in the vc market may aim to escape the high volatility inherent in public markets due to its very liquid nature
