the correspondence of katherine mansfield and john middleton murry is a story in its own right as compelling and poignant as any that mansfield herself invented here juxtaposed for the first time are 300 letters exchanged between them during their extraordinary eleven year relationship the letters begin in january 1912 a month after their first meeting when both were relative newcomers to the london literary scene the last a letter from murry was written four days before katherine died in fontainebleau in january 1923 the intervening years were ones of both feverish creativity and heartbreaking frustration of intense closeness and unassailable distance of shared idealism and as katherine s illness took its inexorable hold of mutual recognition that the glittering partnership they d once envisaged would be cut tragically short whether sparkling or witty reflective or despairing the letters have the immediacy of conversation and the candor of the very finest epistolary writing they illustrate wonderfully the unique personal magnetism which has become part of the mansfield legend and indicate too that posterity has perhaps judged murry more harshly than ever she did as katherine herself wrote i feel no other lovers have walked the earth more joyfully in spite of all the writing of letters often evokes associations of a single author and a single addressee who share in the exchange of intimate thoughts across distances of space and time this model underwrites such iconic notions as the letter representing an image of the soul of the author or constituting one half of a dialogue however justified this conception of letter writing may be in particular instances it tends to marginalize a range of issues that were central to epistolary communication in the ancient world and have yet to receive sustained and systematic investigation in particular it overlooks the fact that letters frequently presuppose and were designed to reinforce communities or indeed to constitute them in the first place this volume explores the interrelation of letters and communities in the ancient world examining how epistolary communication aided in the construction and cultivation of group identities and communities whether social political religious ethnic or philosophical a theoretically informed introduction establishes the interface of epistolary discourse and group formation as a vital but hitherto neglected area of research and is followed by thirteen case studies offering multi disciplinary perspectives from four key cultural configurations greece rome judaism and christianity the first part opens the volume with two chapters on the theory and practice of epistolary communication that focus on ancient epistolary theory and the unavoidable presence of a letter carrier who introduces a communal aspect into any correspondence while the second comprises five chapters that explore configurations of power and epistolary communication in the greek and roman worlds from the archaic period to the end of the hellenistic age five chapters on letters and communities in ancient judaism and early christianity follow in the third part before the volume concludes with an envoi examining the trans historical or indeed timeless philosophical community seneca the younger construes in his letters to lucilius
