a beautiful moving collection of short stories in many of which updike revisits the haunts of his childhood from the vantage point of old age in fiftieth old friends reconnect at a class reunion and one of them is left wondering what does it mean the enormity of having been children and now being old living next to death in the story the full glass the protagonist describes somewhat ruefully the rituals of old age before going to bed he raises his nightly water glass drinking a toast to the visible world his impending disappearance from it be damned in varieties of religious experiences a grandfather visiting his daughter in brooklyn heights watches the tower of the world trade centre fall and his view of a god is forever altered again and again in these memorable stories updike strikes to the heart giving words to what is so often left unsaid he is at once witty devastatingly observant touching and of course a consummate storyteller this is a collection that will be admired and cherished

i wrote this book to inspire young children who grew up without a father to pursue their dreams and understand the importance of themselves know that you still have a life to look forward to i can personally relate to all of you and the hurt you may have experienced i hope the stories i tell you will strengthen your hearts and minds by helping you to move past where he may have left off i have included my experiences and the experiences of others that may be helpful i will also answer some questions you may have this book is not about bashing fathers i admire fathers who take care of their children because their actions encourage fathers who have abandoned their children to do better i have learned a lot over the years about loving myself and those around me my father choosing not to be in my life was not my fault and i am certain he will miss out on knowing me this is my story as i remember it my reality my distorted perspective through the lens of trauma my sparkling joys and darkest most painful miseries my strife my secrets and fall from grace into a rape treatment facility and the unbelievably difficult climb through depression back to self love and faith my father used to say that there simply isn't enough time in life to make all the mistakes in the world ourselves we must learn from each other if we wish to advance as a human race in response i offer in search of my father hoping that fathers might begin to know how vital their presence is in their children's lives if others are inspired to create healthy parent child relationships or accept their fathers even sooner than i did then every word was worth writing this is my story my own self help book but above all else this is the truth of a broken little girl who grew into a compassionate young woman one who spent far too much time in search of her father
