the discipline of linguistics is a perfect example of the limitations of the modern academy the combination of social taboos that make certain subject matter unfit for general knowledge and discovery and the ever narrowing specialization of scientists leaves us with an intellectual institution that can no longer do anything but apply repair and justify the dogma of victorian cosmology that is the rule all must follow linguistics should be one of the most interesting subjects considering it is the study of our most valuable and revealing cultural asset language however recent publications from the linguistic department for public consumption have been some of the most trivial and boring intellectual expositions that have ever been put between two covers using the entire database of science we look at the acquisition of language and how it forms our cultural perspective on life including theories of language evolution we develop the theory of the evolution of language from song one of the few suppositions that charles darwin actually got right from this basis we move on to the roots of proto indo european which we call bear tongue bear tongue is essentially the eurasian language family dimly perceived by one of the greatest linguists of the twentieth century joseph greenberg from this perspective we can now retell the tribal stories from iberia to siberia showing a common origin and motivation for human science and religion a psychologist and a philosopher with opposing viewpoints discuss the extent to which it is possible to report accurately on our own conscious experience considering both the reliability of introspection in general and the particular self reported inner experiences of melanie a subject interviewed using the descriptive experience sampling method can conscious experience be described accurately can we give reliable accounts of our sensory experiences and pains our inner speech and imagery our felt emotions the question is central not only to our humanistic understanding of who we are but also to the burgeoning scientific field of consciousness studies the two authors of describing inner experience disagree on the answer russell hurlburt a psychologist argues that improved methods of introspective reporting make accurate accounts of inner experience possible eric schwitzgebel a philosopher believes that any introspective reporting is inevitably prone to error in this book the two discuss to what extent it is possible to describe our inner experience accurately hurlburt and schwitzgebel recruited a subject melanie to report on her conscious experience using hurlburt's descriptive experience sampling method in which the subject is cued by random beeps to describe her conscious experience the heart of the book is melanie's accounts hurlburt and schwitzgebel's interviews with her and their subsequent discussions while studying the transcripts of the interviews in this way the authors dispute about the general reliability of introspective reporting is steadily tempered by specific debates about the extent to which melanie's particular reports are believable transcripts and audio files of the interviews will be available on the mit press website describing inner experience is not so much a debate as it is a collaboration with each author seeking to refine his position and to replace partisanship with balanced critical judgment the result is an illumination of major issues in the study of consciousness from two sides at once one of the world's science superstars presents a brilliantly illuminating, entertaining, and cutting-edge account of how language actually works. How does language work? How do children learn their mother tongue? Why do languages change over time, making Chaucer's English almost incomprehensible? Steven Pinker explains the profound mysteries of language by picking a deceptively simple, single phenomenon and examining it from every angle. That phenomenon: the existence of regular and irregular verbs. This connects an astonishing array of topics in the sciences and humanities: the history of languages, the illuminating errors of children as they begin to speak, the sources of the major themes in the history of Western philosophy, the latest techniques in identifying genes and imaging the living brain. Pinker makes sense of all of this with the help of a single powerful idea: that language comprises a mental dictionary of memorized words and a mental grammar of creative rules.

cognitive science is among the most fascinating intellectual achievements of the modern era the quest to understand the mind is an ancient one but modern science has offered new insights and techniques that have revolutionized this enquiry oxford university press now presents a masterly history of the field told by one of its most eminent practitioners psychology is the thematic heart of cognitive science which aims to understand human and animal minds but its core theoretical ideas are drawn from cybernetics and artificial intelligence and many cognitive scientists try to build functioning models of how the mind works in that sense margaret boden suggests its key insight is that mind is a very special machine because the mind has many different aspects the field is highly interdisciplinary it integrates psychology not only with cybernetics ai but also with neuroscience and clinical neurology with the philosophy of mind language and logic with linguistic work on grammar semantics and communication with anthropological studies of cultures and with biological and a life research on animal behaviour evolution and life itself each of these disciplines in its own way asks what the mind is what it does how it works how it develops and how it is even possible boden traces the key questions back to descartes s revolutionary writings and to the ideas of his followers and his radical critics through the eighteenth and nineteenth centuries her story shows how controversies in the development of experimental physiology neurophysiology psychology evolutionary biology embryology and logic are still relevant today then she guides the reader through the complex interlinked paths along which the study of mind developed in the twentieth century cognitive science covers all mental phenomena not just cognition knowledge but also emotion personality psychopathology social communication religion motor action and consciousness in each area Boden introduces the key ideas and researchers and discusses those philosophical critics who see cognitive science as fundamentally misguided and she sketches the waves of resistance and acceptance on the part of the media and general public showing how these have affected the development of the field no one else could tell this story as Boden can she has been a member of the cognitive science community since the late 1950s and has known many of its key figures personally her narrative is written in a lively swift moving style enriched by the personal touch of someone who knows the story at first hand her history looks forward as well as back besides asking how state of the art research compares with the hopes of the early pioneers she identifies the most promising current work mind as machine will be a rich resource for anyone working on the mind in any academic discipline who wants to know how our understanding of mental capacities has advanced over the years this volume brings together the current theoretical interest in reconceptualizing second and foreign language learning from a sociocultural perspective on language and learning with practical concerns about second and foreign language pedagogy it presents a set of studies whose focus is on the empirical description of particular practices constructed in classroom interaction that promote the learning of a second or foreign language the authors examine in detail the processes by which the learning of additional languages is accomplished in the interaction of a variety of classrooms and in a variety of languages not only will the findings from the studies reported in this volume help to lay a foundation for the development of a more expansive sociocultural model of second and foreign language learning but on a more practical level they will help language educators in creating a set of principles for identifying and sustaining classroom interactional practices that foster additional language development the volume is distinguished in three ways following a vygotskyan perspective on development the studies assume that language learning is a fundamentally pragmatic enterprise intrinsically linked to language use this breaks from a more traditional understanding of second and foreign language learning which has viewed learning and use as two distinct phenomena the importance of classroom interaction to additional language development is foregrounded the investigations reported in this book are distinguished by their methodological approach because language learning is assumed to be a situated context sensitive and dynamic process the studies do not rely on traditional experimental methods for collecting and analyzing data but rather they involve primarily the use of ethnographic and discourse analytic methods the studies focus on interactional practices that promote second and foreign language learning although a great deal of research has examined first language learning in classrooms from a sociocultural perspective little has looked at second and foreign language classrooms from such a perspective thus there is a strong need for this volume of studies addressing this area of research researchers teacher educators and graduate students across the fields of second and foreign language learning applied linguistics and language education will find this book informative and relevant because of the programmatic implications arising from the studies it will also appeal to teacher educators and teachers of second and foreign languages from the elementary to the university levels
